Suggestions.

The index is full, complete, and believed to be correct, and should be adequate as a help to find individuals named in this Genealogy.

A number with the sign (+) placed before a name in the tabulated lists of children indicates that there is more matter concerning the person thus designated farther on in the book. To find it look ahead for a biographical sketch bearing a corresponding number.

The insertion of belated records at different times necessitated a renumbering of the entire genealogy after it was partly in type; this, and a lack of understanding between the compositor and proofreader occasioned some vexatious mistakes in the numbers of the biographical sketches. These wrong numbers are never very far out of the way however, and the sketches may be readily found.

All errors in names, dates or statements should be reported to the compiler as soon as convenient.

Page 107—The date of birth of Welton Morris is wrong but is just as received.

Page 322—Change Joseph Mortimer to Joshua Mortimer.

Page 502—Luke Penfield was twice married; names of all his children are given but nothing concerning the first wife has been received.

Foreword.

I thought it good to speake somewhat hereof, trusting yat the pleasant contemplacion of the thinge it selfe shall make the length of the preface lesse tedious. [R. Eden, First Booke on America. Ep. to Reader, p. 9.]

In this convenient after word of the author which becomes the Foreword of the book I desire to express my appreciation of the exhaustive researches made in Whitcomb genealogy by Francis Wayland Shepardson, M. A. of the University of Chicago, and my deep sense of gratitude to him for consigning to me in 1902, I believe quite unreservedly, the records and data which were the result of those researches. Prof. Shepardson became interested in genealogy in 1885 and during the years following devoted his vacations and his leisure hours to this quest. From a letter concerning his experience, the following is quoted:

"I burned the midnight oil hunting dead Whitcombs. I wrote letters all over the United States and gathered a great mass of material. I put long lost members of families in correspondence with their near but unknown relations. I found kin for one man twenty miles from his home, although he did not know he had a relation in the world. It was very exciting. I spent part of one summer visiting old Whitcomb haunts in New England, spending days in old burying grounds, copying data and epitaphs and more than once eating the noonday lunch off of the flat tombstone of some departed Whitcomb."

Prof. Shepardson has a personal interest in this genealogy being connected to the Whitcomb Family by marriage to Cora Leonore, daughter of John in the Robert Line. See number 1033, page 147.

I would also acknowledge to those kinsfolk, near and remote, who have so generously given me assistance since I began my researches in 1895, my cordial appreciation of their kindness and encouragement. The list of these friends is too long to be enumerated as a whole, but a few of the faithful lieutenants who have adventured with me on this inglorious campaign are gratefully named below:

During the preparation of the Whitcomb Genealogy a countless number of histories, biographies, genealogies, and miscellaneous works have been read or consulted, but proper credit is given in the body of this book to those from which quotations have been made.

In collecting data for the present volume only the most trustworthy authorities and the best authenticated records have been selected. It is too much to expect that the work is perfect or complete. No genealogy ever attained perfection or completeness. Mistakes are made in deciphering faded and time-stained records, in interpreting illegible handwriting, in accepting statements from people who do not know whereof they affirm, and in deciding between conflicting records.

FOREWORD.

There must be several thousand records still uncollected. Many record blanks which have been mailed, return marked "Unclaimed." From others I do not hear, but records from people of our name, quite unknown to me, still come in by twos and threes, though the manuscript is in the hands of the printer. I hope to continue to receive records until every Whitcomb shall be represented. These new records will be tabulated and preserved and eventually published in a second edition, or as an appendix to the present volume.

Relegated to a section by themselves are a number of as yet untraced Whitcombs. Some of these are old puzzles over which much time and money have been spent; others have come to hand recently. There are large probabilities that would place each one of these in this or that line, but in no case has any individual or group been tabulated except upon evidence which was believed to be unquestionable. The honest way, therefore, is to leave these unknown ones where they are until further research shall place them where they belong.

It is a matter of sincere regret that among the illustrations there are no pictures of Colonial and Revolutionary War heroes "by the name of Whetcombe;" but wide and exhaustive research reveals no portrait, silhouette, or other counterfeit presentment of Immigrant John or any of his sons, nor of Gen. John, Col. Asa, Asa of Barnard, Lieut. Joseph, "Major Ben," Gen. Philemon, Col. Elisha, Col. Jonathan Priest, or other Whitcomb hero of the earlier wars.

The medicine chest of Col. Asa Whitcombe is a treasured heirloom in the family of the late Wm. Frederick Whitcomb of Dorchester, Mass., and his pocket compass is a relic owned and valued by J. D. Whitcomb of Boston. Letters from Gen. Washington to both Gen. John Whitcombe and Col. Asa Whitcombe, with much other memorabilia, were burned by an overprim housekeeper who was ignorant of the value of what she destroyed. Many colonial and Revolutionary war relics are in the possession of different members of the family but have no distinctive quality which demands their illustration here.

FOREWORD.

Concerning the coat of arms.—until the pedigree of John (<sup>1</sup>) becomes quite clear it would seem to be of little consequence which of the several different forms should be reproduced in this Book. They are really so much alike that the heraldic description by Burke and that given by the Heralds' College do not conflict except in the tinctures. Burke places gold on the shield where the other authority places silver. Descriptions of the different forms of the Whitcombe arms are given in the chapter on English Whitcombes. The frontispiece displays the form most familiar in America.

I believe that a few months spent in the southwestern counties of England, Dorset and Somerset, perhaps also Salop and Essex, with some money judiciously spent at the London Record Office and Somerset House, would reveal the pedigree of John Whetcombe (<sup>1</sup>). I hope to undertake this quest either in person or by proxy in the near future. Experience teaches that whatever one's limitations or whatever the difficulties of the situation a way always opens to the earnest seeker. In Spenser's Faery Queene the Red Cross Knight went step by step until:

"At last he came unto an yron doore
That fast was lockt; but key found not at alle,
But in the doore a little grate was pight
Through which he sent his voyce and lowd did calle."

Each Whitcomb genealogist in turn has come to the "yron doore," but it, too, must have its "little grate." That is to be found and then the answer to the "calle" will be sent along the line. In other words, the pedigree of John (<sup>1</sup>) will be printed on folios and mailed to owners of the genealogy, when it may be tipped into the volumes.

The English Whitcombs.

HERE are various traditions and theories concerning the origin of our forbears in England. They came from Normandy with William the Conquerer. They came from France to escape religious (?) persecution. They were Welsh and became English by the process of subjugation. The last theory seems probable. It is certain the name was well known in the Western and Southwestern parts of England in the time of Henry III., when, according to the Harleian Manuscripts, Whitcombes lived in County Somerset. This county lies just east of the line dividing England and Wales and was conquered from the Welsh between the sixth and eighth centuries. Next to Somerset just to the southeast lies County Dorset where Whitcombes have flourished in the early and the later times. A branch of the family lived in the time of Henry IV., in Berwick, not that beautiful seaport and neutral ground in early times between the warring factions of England and Scotland, but a less noted Berwick to the South. Still later the name became known in the counties of Salop, Essex and London. In the city of London is a street called Whitcomb and in the outskirts of the metropolis is a parish by the same name. There have been many of the name in County Dorset; in its shire town, Dorchester, in the seaport, Weymouth, from which port the second shipload of emigrants bound for Dorchester, Massachusetts, set sail, and in Sherborne where some of the family still reside; Sherborne was the seat of a bishopric from the 8th to the 11th century, and a Whetcombe was its sometime resident prelate.

Regardless of the origin of the family, the English name was doubtless derived from the locality where our people first lived on British soil. "The hereditary surname, the name of the family handed on from father to son was at the time of the Norman conquest unknown in England. While many of the Norman settlers brought with them the surnames which they had already taken, a crowd of men, both Norman and English, now took surnames from their estates and birthplaces in England." (Encyc. Brit. Vol. 8, p. 300.)

Name dictionaries give many examples of names thus bestowed or derived, though few of such names have preserved their original form. Thus the name Whittaker came from White (Acor or) Acre. Whittier from Wittowere (white tanner or dresser) etc. In like manner Whitcomb signifies White Valley. Combe is a valley or a pocket in the high country. The Century Dictionary says: "Combe—a narrow valley—a hollow between two hills—a dale—a dingle—a valley opening downward enclosed by steep and perpendicular cliffs. Word limited to portions of southwestern England and Wales, and to parts of Ireland." The first syllable now spelled Whit was formerly spelled Whete, then it became Whet and our ancestor John,<sup>1</sup> and his sons so spelled the name. Now whete was the old English form of white, and since combe was a valley between high cliffs and the cliffs of southwestern England are of chalk and white, the inference is that the name signified White Valley and was bestowed upon our ancestors because they were men from the white cliffs and valleys of County Somerset and County Dorset.

THE ENGLISH WHITCOMBS.

All this is more interesting than important except for the one fact which it proves, namely, that the name is an old one in Great Britain and that Burke was well advised when he speaks of our ancestors as the "—ancient family of Whitcombe."

Another fact worthy of note is that though families of this name are found in widely separated localities of England their Arms are the same or so nearly so as to indicate that they all sprung from the one stock. The Arms are sometimes quartered with others by marriage but always "per pale gold or silver and sable" with eagles displayed and counterchanged" represent the Whitcombe Arms. It has been said that neither Symon nor John as far as is known ever used or possessed the coat of arms. Symon Whetcombe never came to America and his manner of life can only be conjectured. But the evidence concerning him shows that he was a man of gentle birth and breeding and without doubt possessed and used some form of the family Arms. With John, our American ancestor, the case was different. Comparatively little use was made of Arms in America during the century 1620-1720. It was a period of stress, and distinctions of rank and class were ignored. Again, the Indian raids upon Lancaster must have destroyed every article of luxury possessed by the early settlers, John Whetcombe's family not excepted.

Among the baptismal or given names John, William, Robert and James seem to have been common, also Richard, Thomas, Edward and Symon. (The Bible nomenclature which was so universal in the first generations of the American Whitcombs was an expression of the Puritan sentiment which perhaps brought our progenitor to the New World. It prevailed to the same extent in the families of their Puritan neighbors.)

While it would be interesting to follow the lines of Whetcombe down from Thomas Whetcombe of Whitecombe in County Somerset, who married Edith, daughter of Adam Mairsyne in County Salop in the time of Henry IV., it is thought better to show the pedigrees as they appear in the "Early Visitations" copied from the Harleian

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

Collection<sup>n</sup> and to devote the space that would be taken up with those genealogies to historical narratives of members of some of the later English families both male and female. From these, clews may be found which will lead back or forward to the parentage of John of Dorchester, Scituate and Lancaster in the Colony of Massachusetts.

The Topographer and Genealogist says (Vol. III., p. 266): "Hoskins, Sir Bennett, married Gertrude, daughter of John, Lord Arundel of Trerese and relict of Peter Whitcombe of London, merchant. She died August, 1709."

"Peter Whitcombe, a turkey merchant at the time of his decease; he left his wife Gertrude, daughter of Lord Sherrard, with child. It proved a son who lived but a little while whereupon the estate descended to Mr. Whitcomb's two daughters,—Mary, wife of Thomas Paget, Esq., of the Bedchamber to Prince George and a relation of the Earl of Uxbridge, and Elizabeth, wife of Francis Darrell, son of Sir Marmaduke Darrell. Having obtained an act of Parliament they sold Brackstead Hall Manor and demesne (in Brackley, County Essex) to —————, etc."

From the History of Dorset by Hutchins, Second edition, is gleaned the following:

"The town the Whitcombs lived in was Lillington, a village situated one mile and a half southeast from Thorneford. The ancient mansion was in the small town of not over forty houses and occupied mostly by laborers, and formerly belonged to the Coles and afterwards to the Whetcombs. It stood a little southwest from the church and was taken down about six years ago (1815). The site is now converted into a farmyard. The Earl of Pembroke is the present owner of the estate. In 1293 the territory belonged to the Priory of Bradenstoke. After its dissolution, it came to the Kelways of great note in Hampshire. Robert Kelway probably sold the estate to the Coles of Wiltshire and from them it descended to the Parrys and of them purchased by Samuel Whetcomb, Sheriff of this county, 1717.

*See pages 21-23, inclusive.

THE ENGLISH WHITCOMBS.

“Dr. John Whetcombe (connected with the Cole family) was consecrated bishop of Clonfert and Kilmacduagh in Ireland, 1735—was translated to Down and Conner, 1741, to the archbishopric of Cashel, 1752, and died 1753.”

“The Whetcombes seem to have been originally of Sherbourne, a nearby township, and are frequently mentioned in the registry of that town prior to 1558. Their Arms are,—Paly, Argent and Sable. three spread Eagles, or, crest a demi-eagle rising with displayed wings out of a Muriel Coronet, or. The seat of the Whetcombes was an old decayed house, once the mansion of the Kelways, Coles, etc. It was repaired by the late owner, and in 1738 these Arms were in it. The inscription on Dr. Whetcombe’s monument at Maiden Newton (Vol. 2, page 251), was painted in white letters on a black tablet, the greater part being obliterated by time and damp. In the Athen. Oxon. Vol. 1, page 622 and in the Fasti, handsome mention is made of this Dr. Whetcombe, who married the sister of Dr. Holland, the pious and learned regius Professor of Divinity at Oxford. Dr. John Whetcombe died suddenly in the house of Angel Gray, Esq., of Dorsetshire in 1648, aged 60.”

The Arms now upon Dr. Whetcombe’s monument differ from the Arms of Whetcombe at Lillington. The former being, Argent, two Pales, Sable, two eaglets counterchanged, impaling semee of Fleur-de-Lis, a Lion rampant, Argent. The latter Arms (Lillington) are, Paling of seven Argent and Sable, three eaglets displayed counterchanged and not Or (gold) and Sable, as given by Hutchins.

(Hutchins Vol. 2, page 394). “Henry the VIII. granted the manor at Thorneford a part of the bishopric of the Abbey of Sherbourne to John Horsey. Sir Ralph Horsey and George, his son, conveyed the manor of Thorneford and Sherbourne to John Foyle and Richard Ryves, they conveyed it to Nicholas Winnif and Robert Parsons. The other moiety descended to Sir George Horsey, then 28 years of age. It remained for some time after in this family but seems to have been sold by piece meal to several private owners. It came to the Whetcombes and is still claimed under them. By the style of the manor of Thorneford, the rectory in 1381 was not taxed. It is a peculiar of Sarem, the ancient patron was the Abbot of Sherbourne, the presentation for many years past in the Whetcombes, Samuel Whetcombe was a patron of the rectory while Henry Emery was Registrar, 1702."

In Vol. 4, page 67, there are several inscriptions copied from the monuments of Samuel Whetcombe, his son Robert the oldest, Samuel the second, John the third and Simon the fourth son and all four sons of Mary Whetcombe, widow of Samuel. Samuel, the father, died January 20th, 1739, aged 75 years; Robert, November 20th, 1737, age 25 years; John in 1742, age 25 years; Simon 1745, age 27 years, and Samuel in 1762, age 46 years. The mother, Mary, died 1765, aged 80 years. These monuments are found in the church of Sherbourne, in the aisle formerly belonging to the Coles and Whetcombes. The Arms which are upon the funeral achievements in the church and the shield upon the monument taken from the Arms of Whetcombe are described on page 65, Vol. 4 and are there contrasted with the Whetcombe who married Dr. Holland's sister.

WILL OF JOHN WHETCOMBE.

John Whetcombe, of Shirborne, Dorset, Mercer, 2 May, 1598, proved 22 September, 1598. To the Parish Church there for and toward the reparations of the same. To Francis Scarlett, minister there. To the Free Grammar School there. To the Alms House and to the poor of Shirborne. My two hired servants and my apprentice Mellige. Elizabeth, my wife shall have my tenement and dwelling house, etc., that I bought of John Frye, with that parcel of land adjoining, which I bought of Phillip Manfield, during her natural life. And she shall enjoy my lease that I bought of Sir Walter Rawleighe, knight, for the term of thirty years, &c., &c. Other leases—To my son Robert Whetcombe my lands and tenements in Trent, Somerset, he to allow out of said lands, to my son John, his brother, six pounds a year for twenty-one years. I give to Robert also, my dwelling house, &c., in Shirborne. He shall have to apprentice my son Joseph for seven years. To my son John my lands and tenements in Ackerman Street, Shirborne. To my son Samuel (after decease of my wife Elizabeth) my lease which I bought of Sir Walter Rawleighe, knight, &c.

Item. I give and bequeath unto my son Symon, immediately after the decease of Elizabeth my wife, all that my lease of Westcome and Spargrove, lying and being in the parish of Batcombe in the County of Somerset,—and also the sum of fourscore pounds to be paid him at his age of one and twenty years. To my daughter Jane my lease of Beare mill in the parish of Beere Haggat in the County of Dorset, and one hundred pounds at her day of marriage, if she shall marry with the consent and good liking of her mother and my overseers. My brother Thomas Whetcombe's children, which be four in number, shall have twenty shillings apiece, at the age of twenty-one i. e. Thomas, Edmond, Christian and John.

Provisions against death of any of the sons without issue male, &c. Wife Elizabeth to be sole Executrix and Mr. William Mewe, my brother Hugh Whetcombe, my brother Edmond Lane and John Stoite to be overseers.

WILL OF SYMON WHETCOMBE.

Symon Whetcombe, citizen and clothworker of London, inhabiting in the parish of All Saints Staynings, in the same city, 5 March, 1630, proved 7 February. 1637. My loving wife Mary to be my executrix, unto whom (my debts being first paid and satisfied) I give and bequeath all the remainder of estate, &c., &c., and all my lands, tenements, &c., in Wymbourne minister, Dorset. And because my estate consisting of merchandize in the parts beyond the seas is casual and uncertain, I do therefore forbear to give any particular legacies to pious or charitable uses or to my kindred and other friends, leaving it to the Godly care and wisdom of my executrix to do according to the estate which the Lord shall send to her hands, as may be most for the glory of God, the credit and reputation of me her husband, praying her to have a particular regard to Simon Whetcombe, son of my brother Robert Whetcombe, and to my Godson Symon Wilde, the son of my good friend John Wilde of London, merchant, as also to my servants which are now with me, if they shall be abiding with us at my death.

Wit: Adoniram Byfield, Benjamin Pitt and Chris. Breres.

trary, so he had also inclined the hearts of several others in England to be at work about the same design; for about this time, the Council established at Plymouth for the planting, ruling, ordering and governing of New England, had by a deed, indented under the common seal, bearing date 19 March, 1627, bargained and sold unto some knights and gentlemen about Dorchester, viz: Sir Henry Roswell, Sir John Young, Knights; Thomas Southcart, John Humphrey, John Endicott and Symon Whetcomb, Gents; that part of New England that lies between the Merrimac and Charles Rivers in the bottom of Massachusetts Bay. And, not long after, the aforesaid gentlemen were brought into acquaintance with several other religious persons of like quality, in and about London, such as Mr. Winthrop, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Dudley, Mr. Cradock, Mr. Goffe and Sir Richard Saltonstall, who, being at first associated with them, at length bought of them all their rights and interest in New England aforesaid; and consulting together about settling some plantations in New England, upon the account of Religion, where such as were called non-comformists might, with the favor and leave of the king, have a place of reception, if they should transport themselves into America, there to enjoy the liberty of their own persuasion in matters of worship and church discipline without disturbance of the peace of the kingdom, and without offense to others, not likeminded with themselves, did at the last resolve with one consent to petition the king's majesty to confirm unto the forenamed and their associates the tract of land aforementioned, by a new grant or patent, which was accordingly obtained.

MEANING OF COUNTERCHANGED.

“Counterchanging is dividing the field of a shield in such a manner that it is in part of a metal and in part of a colour, and then arranging the changes in such a manner that they shall be reciprocally of the same colour and metal.”

MEANING OF PALY.

If a shield be borne divided by a perpendicular line in the center of the shield it is parted “Per pale.” (If more divisions occur it is said to be paly of the number given as in the Whitcombe Arms: paly of six or and sable.)

The Pale is said to denote military strength and fortitude, and has been bestowed upon those who have impaled or otherwise defended cities or who have supported the government of their sovereign, and “for standing uprightly to their prince and country” (Guillim). ## John Whitcomb and his Descendants in America.

JOHNS WHITCOMB (or Whetcombe as the name was spelled) is believed to have been the first of the Whitcomb family to settle permanently in America. He was long supposed to be the son of Symon Whetcombe who was one of the original patentees of the old Massachusetts Colony as one of the six Englishmen of gentle birth to whom was made the famous Grant of Land*, under charter by the king. But the publication of the will of Symon's father, John of Sherbourne (Dorset, England), shows this belief to have been erroneous.

According to this will** which was proved in 1598, Symon was at that date under twenty-one years of age, and as John, our progenitor is allowed to have been born about 1588, it is obvious that Symon could not have been his father.

*See Grant of Land on p. 19.

**This will which is reprinted from "Genealogical Gleanings in England," by Henry F. Waters, may be found on p. 18.

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

Failing Symon as the father, some of our kindred are adopting him as a brother of Immigrant John and already one or more books have been published naming John of Sherborne, the writer of the will in question, as the father of both Symon and "our" John. Unfortunately, there is nothing in the will to warrant that finality; neither does further research warrant it. John of Sherborne's son, John, is given, by the terms of the will, his father's "lands and tenements in Ackerman Street, Shirbourne," but it is not yet learned that this John, the owner of the Ackerman Street lands and tenements, came to America, neither is it settled that he did not come hither, though a trusted English correspondent writes that "John Whetcombe Senior and Junior are buried in Sherborne." This statement which might seem to settle the question does not settle it, for no dates were given nor have dates since been secured. So in the event of there having been three Johns of Sherborne one of them may have been our ancestor after all.

But that careful and trustworthy investigator and genealogist, Henry F. Waters did not decide Symon's brother John to have been our ancestor. He frankly confessed that he had not found from what part of England John came nor whose son he was. There have been much research and correspondence during the past year but today as ever since we sadly relinquished Symon, the American Whitcombs are looking for an ancestor back of Immigrant John,—that is, a definite, individual, verified ancestor.*

Prof. Shepardson believed that he had found something worth following up in Alexander Brown's "Genesis of the United States"

***Ancestors there are in plenty, several there seem to be that would fulfil the requirements as to age, eligibility, etc., but choosing an ancestor like choosing a wife, should not be done lightly or unadvisedly. As for myself I would go all my life without the one, as I have gone all my life, to date, without the other, rather than to get one which later would be found to have been ill chosen. We are not very sorry orphans when we (the youngest born of us) can show a clean line of ancestry back for ten (or is it eleven?) generations, and if the real ancestor does not materialize after reasonable research, what is to hinder calling a convention of Whitcombs, when eligible ancestors may be proposed and balloted for, the one getting the strongest vote to be it?—(Extract from a letter to C. W.)

JOHN WHETCOMBE (1).

and, strangely enough, two professional genealogists have directed attention to the same hint. The paragraph is quoted below:

"Harper, John, . . . . . a member of the East India Company. June 16, 1620; he gave a Mr. John Whitcombe who married his daughter Anne, a share in Virginia." There is a fair monument to himself and wife on the south side of the parish church of St. Margaret Moyses, Breadstreet Ward, London, with an inscription. From the latter I glean that John Harper was treasurer of Christ's Church Hospital, and Alderman Deputy of Breadstreet Ward, London. He had five children but at the time of his death he left only a son John, and a daughter Anne married to John Whitcomb, London.

Further we find in "Visitations of London"* as published in 1880, that there were living in 1634 John Harper, gentleman and his sister Anne Harper, the latter married to John Whitcombe gentleman, of London, and having children; Thomas, John, Robert, and five daughters, and that the three sons were living in 1634.

Though facts are what we want, beliefs are worthy of consideration since they sometimes lead to facts, and the belief is gaining ground that John, second son of John and Anne Harper Whitcomb of London, and Immigrant John were one and the same man. Prof. Shepardson believes it and gives his reasons which are quoted here:

"(1) John Whitcomb, who married Anne Harper, received a share in Virginia.

"(2) 'Virginia' in 1620 was synonymous with 'America.' The Massachusetts settlers went to 'Virginia.'

"(3) John and Anne had oldest son who was heir under primogeniture rule.

"(4) John had only a second son's prospects in England and when his father offered him the 'Share in Virginia' he accepted it and with Frances and the children sailed for America."

If this theory be as correct as it is reasonable to one familiar with Colonial conditions, then John had a line direct to the time of Henry IV. and was entitled to the Arms of the Berwick Whitcombs.

The English Whitcombs were of the Established Church. Several of them had been church dignitaries as is narrated in the Chapter on English Whitcombs, but during the transitional epoch following the evolution of the Pilgrims—that period of unrest when spiritual awakening and religious fervor were at flood tide, certain members of the family became Puritans. According to the late Samuel Whitcomb, Jr., Dr. John Whitcomb the Oxonian was one; Symon was certainly one and John, our progenitor was one.

Not all the Puritans were non-conformists, many of them were contented to remain in England and others came to New England not as Separatists but with the hope of bettering their fortunes. What part religion had in impelling John's emigration must be left to conjecture but it doubtless had its influence.

Though Symon the avowed and zealous Puritan never came to America*, John appeared in Dorchester as early as 1633. He may have come earlier; perhaps he was one of the voyagers with the good Winthrop on the ship Arbella in 1630. It would be interesting to find complete lists of passengers in boats destined for Dorchester in 1630-1633, but if such lists exist they are not yet found.

John became a church member in 1635; this and the birth of his youngest son Josiah, which occurred in 1638, are the only events of his family life recorded during the years he spent in Dorchester. Later evidence shows him to have been well-to-do for the times, a man of intelligence and enterprise much given to buying and selling land. His hand writing was strong and full of individuality and it is obvious that he was a man of academical education.

*Symon Whitcomb continued an active member of the Company at home but did not come to New England. He held the office of assistant, was constant in his attendance at the meetings and was employed on many committees. Besides his subscription to the capital stock he joined with others in a loan to the Company and was one of the purchasers of the ship Eagle afterward the Arbella. We may conclude then that he was a man of some substance, a respectable citizen, and a zealous Puritan. P. 7, Vol. III., Trans & Coll. Am. Antiq. Soc.)

JOHN WHETCOMBE (1).

In 1640 he removed to Scituate where he owned land, one piece being a farm of 108 acres near the mouth of the North river on the Marshfield side, and after 1646 when he became one of the Conihasset* Partners he owned the lands which through that transaction became his share.

During his residence in Scituate he was made constable, then one of the most remunerative as well as one of the most important offices in the gift of the townsmen. To act as sheriff he must have been a freeman in Scituate, but the only mention of his being such is in the Records of Plymouth Colony where the entry is, under date June 3, 1652, "Freeman admitted to this court and sworn, "John Whetcombe and John Willis." Marvin says, "Any man could become a freeman—he had only to be a Christian." Again, The Memorial History of Boston (Vol. I.) says, "Church members and church members only, exercised the franchise." Therefore as he became a church member in 1635 he may have been a voter and have taken part in town affairs from that date.

In 1644, he sold his farm on North River to one Thomas Hicks and another disposal of land in Scituate was in 1654 when he conveyed half his share in the Conihasset lands to John Williams, Jr., giving the other half to his son Robert. During this year, 1654, he *Concerning the Conihasset Grant there was in Scituate Township much discussion between Hingham and Scituate and Plymouth Colony regarding boundaries, from 1642 to 1682. Within the original bounds of Scituate township was included a large tract of land which the Colony Court had granted to four gentlemen, usually called "Merchant adventurers of London," called "Conihasset Grant." This was purchased of the other three by one of the four original owners, Mr. Hatherly, before 1646, and in that year he divided it into 30 shares (reserving one-fourth part of the whole) and sold it for 180 pounds to a certain Company since called the "Conihasset Partners." "Many of this Company were such as had already located themselves upon these lands, and were twenty-seven in all, including James Cudworth, John Whetcomb, and Rodolphus Ellmes—"These partners appointed their clerks, surveyors, committees and agents and conducted their affairs with all the efficiency of a corporate town." Later, upon Hatherly and the Conihasset partners petitioning the Courts that the territory allowed was "too straight" for their growing needs and discussion arising as to the bounds of this tract, in 1656 the Court granted Mr. Hatherly a tract three miles square on the Westerly side of Scituate, as indemnity for his "entanglements with the people of Scituate" and to "satisfy the Conihasset Partners." This he divided into 40 shares of which the Conihasset Partners had 27. (Gleaned from Dean's Hist. of Scituate; pp. 5 and 6.)

removed to Lancaster where two years before, when the town was platted, he had invested some money. Not all his children accompanied him to Lancaster. His daughter Catherine was settled in Scituate where in 1644 she had been married to Rodolphus Ellmes, a young man who had come over from England in 1635 on the Planter when he was but fifteen years old; Robert, who had received his patrimony, also remained in Scituate and James, whose boyhood and youth seem to have passed without observation, is not mentioned until later when he is discovered a merchant in Boston and a man of affairs.

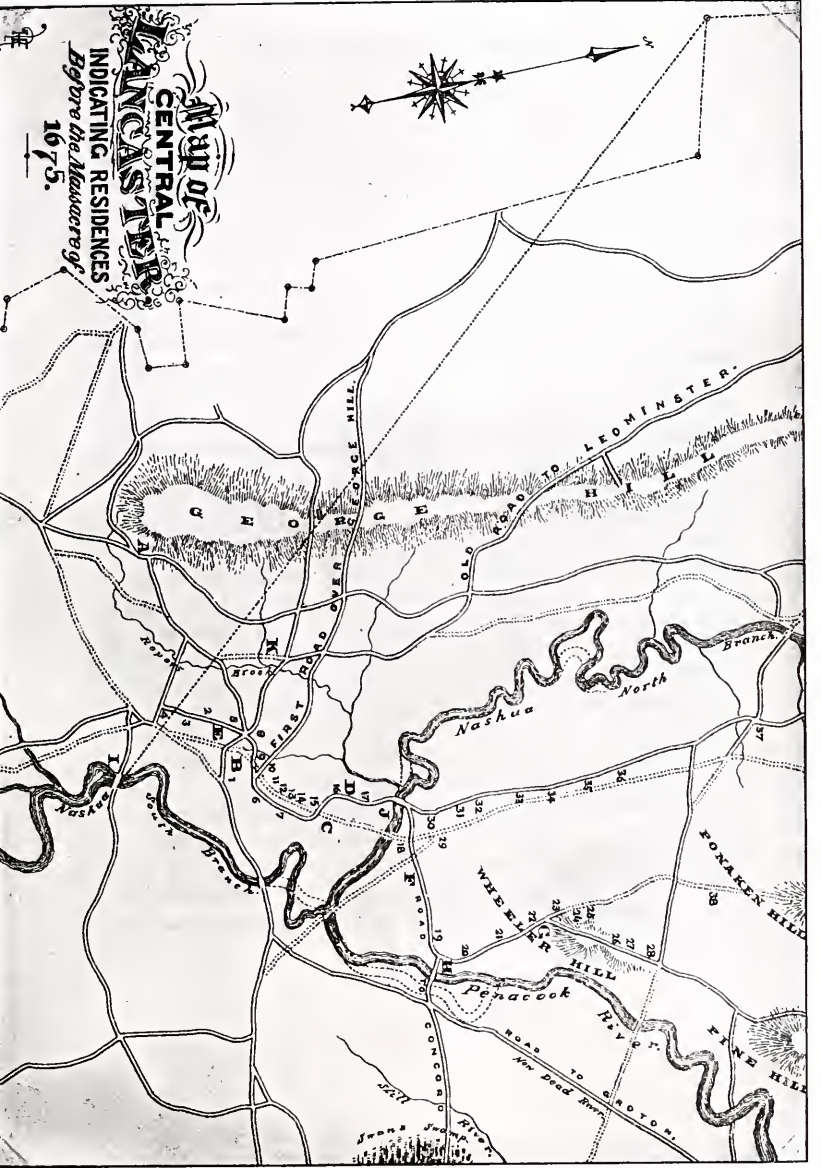

John Whitcomb and his son John, Jr., have been named as among the founders of the town of Lancaster. John's signature appears as "one of the pioneer settlers in the Nashaway Plantation which afterward became Lancaster" according to Mr. Nourse's Early Records, and, though he was not among those who actually took up a residence in 1652, he was among those who had a right by the conditions of the covenant to come later. He was also one of the signers to the petition for a township,—“We being now about twentie families, etc.” —[Nourse's Early Records, p. 37.]

The first inhabitants of Lancaster were apportioned land according to their "estate," that is, "so much land to every £100 of estate and accordingly for a greater or less estate." In these divisions John Whitcomb's estate is large in proportion to the rest, in fact among the largest. From the old entries reprinted in "The Early Records" the following quaint descriptions are copied.

"The lands of John Whetcombe senior.

John's house lot is numbered "33" on the accompanying map and his son John was assigned a lot of equal size next to it marked "34." These lots extended across the street eastward meeting the other range of lots upon the Neck. The present Postoffice and Bank build-in Lancaster are upon old Whitcomb land.

The family next, on No. 35, was named Gates and in the Gates Genealogy, recently published, the frank admission is made that Mr. Gates was of an impetuous temper and quarreled with his neighbors, the Whitcombs, thus confirming the following which is by Mr. Nourse in the Early Records: "The Gates blood seems to have been of decidedly tropical nature. . . . Stephen Gates quarreled with his neighbors, the Whitcombs, was deprived of his constable's staff and moved away from Lancaster after less than three years residence."

This was the man who brought action against John Whitcomb, then seventy years old, on a complaint that his swine had been killed by John's sons. The following note of hand, and petition are very human documents and full of interest:

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

NOTE OF HAND.

"John Whetcombe for and in consideration of three swine killed and spoiled by his three sonnes, doth hereby promise to pay unto Steven Gates the sume of forty-five shill. in wheate within a week after michael tyde next 1658 to be payed at his house in Sudbury the sd Steven allowing for the carriage of the wheate tenn shill 6d.

Date Apr. 2, 1658.

John later petitioned to be released from paying the note in the following document:

"To the honored County Court at Charlestown. The humble Petition of Jno. Whetcome humbly sheweth that whereas yor Petitioner hath set his hand to a note to pay fortie and five shillings to Steven Gates of Sudbury. It was by reason of age and weakness I did not consider of it that I had no right to pay anything to him before he did duly make it apeare that I had damnified him. John Whetcomb."

According to the Middlesex Court Records John had decided the case against himself by giving his note; this note, John being a Christian and a law abiding citizen, doubtless "payd in good wheate after michael tyde," and later events prove that "Peace hath her victories," for during the two or three succeeding generations several marriages occurred between the sons of the turbulent Stephen and the daughters of the self-respecting John.

The products of John's tillage in Lancaster up to 1662 were corn, tobacco and flax with roots and garden herbs and vegetables. The farm probably yielded maple sugar also and the inventory shows that there was an orchard. Log houses were the rule in the time of John and a description of one would probably give the features of all. They were usually of one story and an attic. Small openings in the log walls served as windows; these were protected at night by shutters made of hewn planks; sometimes glass was simulated by the use of skins scraped to semi-transparency or by the skins of bladders. Later the luxury of small panes of greenish glass was introduced. Doors were made of hewn plank battened together and the latch-string was universal. A huge chimney in the middle of the house provided a fireplace which served the purposes of heating and cookery and in Lancaster each family ground its own corn until to the general rejoicing, a miller with his wheel and millstones arrived. There was no idle class; whatever had been a man's condition in England here he worked with his hands. If he had a trade so much the better; if he had not he tried to have, for necessity compelled him to be resourceful and inventive. The miller, the smith, the shoemaker were in demand and every man was in some degree an agriculturist. There and then "Adam delved and Eve span."

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

After some thirty years of this primitive life in the Colony, eight of it spent in Lancaster, the aged Puritan John Whetcombe, met "the inevitable hour," September 24, 1662, and died aged about seventy-four years. He was laid with other forefathers of the hamlet in "the old burying ground," but today no fragment of even a battered stone marks his resting place.

He was married in England to Frances ———, family name unknown, and in England his older children were born. He had certainly five sons, perhaps six, and three daughters. There are no records of births, but in wills and other documents the children's names have been found. He died intestate and the widow and children mutually agreed upon a division of the property which was approved by the court. Frances made her will May 12, 1671, and died at Lancaster May 17, 1671. She named her youngest daughter, Mary, as executrix.

CHILDREN:

In it is a clause, "To son Rodolphus Elmes (now in parts beyond the seas) the sum of £10 if he shall be living at the time of my decease." The children of Rhodolphus and Catherine were:

Sarah, born Sept. 29, 1645; married 1662 Thomas Hatch.

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

At the time of John's decease his children, with the possible exception of James, were all living in the towns of Lancaster and Scituate. They married and had children in those towns where, indeed, their descendants remained in some cases for several generations. Catherine left a numerous posterity who settled in Scituate and vicinity and Robert's descendants lived on his estate for several generations. But in Lancaster the family met change and disaster. John was accidentally drowned leaving no sons; Job removed to Connecticut; Jonathan died and his widow was killed by Indians during one of their merciless raids upon the town; members of the next generation adventured into other settlements or new plantations, and in the fifth generation the Whitcombs had scattered widely from both Scituate and Lancaster and were found in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania and Canada. They now report from every state and territory in the United States (with two exceptions) and also from Alaska, Cuba, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines and South America.

Numbers of our name from America have gone to Europe and Great Britain on business, for education or diversion and some have remained. There are American Whitcombs, or their descendants, of other names resident in Paris, Belgium, Switzerland, Vienna, Berlin and London who are known to the writer; some of them are mentioned in these pages, others being descendants in female lines have not been named. None of them at home or abroad has brought any grave discredit on the name.*

The American Whitcombs have been patriotic and loyal from the earliest times. It has been reserved for the few to have become distinguished, but as a whole they have always been ready when wanted and have been faithful to duty, however hard or irksome the duty

*It is a fact that I have never found any record of a Whitcomb serving a penitentiary sentence or even arrested on a criminal charge. There have been many cases reported of marked eccentricity, some of dementia and others of insanity, but not one born imbecile or idiotic; a matter not for exultation but for devout thankfulness.

has been. Had it been possible to carry out the author's original plan and to have placed the names of Whitcombs who have served in the successive wars in tabulated form the lists would have made a brave showing, but the biographical sketches, which follow this chapter brief and inadequate as they are, speak eloquently for the name.

The Whitcombs did valiant service in the Colonial Wars and during the Revolution father and sons, sometimes to the number of five or six from the one home were found in the ranks. In the Mexican War, in the second war with England, in the struggle for the preservation of the Union and in the Spanish-American War the Whitcombs bravely and gallantly have done their brave and gallant part.

These words of the late Samuel Whitcomb, Jr., may form a fitting close to this chapter:

"I love and revere my own hardy but honest ancestry. But few are needed of the world-amazing sort. To subdue the wilderness of a country, to open its lands to cultivation, to fill its rivers with vessels, to cover its hills with useful animals and its valleys with crops of food, as well as to carry a flag of intelligent, virtuous, and law-maintaining liberty to every sea and coast of our Globe is a Heaven-given destiny, for which you and I and all true Yankees shall ever be thankful. If we are permitted also to leave a well trained family or posterity, no dynasty or nobility of Europe or Asia need be the object of our envy. Our future, and the inheritance of our children, is all we ought to desire."

JAMES WHITCOMB,<sup>2</sup> (John,<sup>1</sup>) appeared in Boston as early as 1662. Whether he was, as is indicated above, a son of Immigrant John is a question over which authorities differ in opinion.

It has been suggested that he might have been a descendant of Richard Whitcomb* for no apparent reason other than that there had been a Richard Whitcombe in America who formed the subject of a sketch by a man named Willis, and it is further adduced in support of the theory that James Whitcomb names in his will his uncle Edward Wyllis.

On the other hand several conscientious chroniclers place him among the children of John<sup>1</sup> where it would seem he might very properly be left at least until it can be shown that he belongs elsewhere. But instead of his being a younger son of John the evidence shows him to have been the oldest. John and Jonathan, Job and Josiah are all mentioned in the annals of Lancaster. Would not James have been likewise mentioned had he spent his youth or early manhood there as the presumption is he would have done had he been one of the younger children?

Instead, he was a freeman in 1669 and a husband and father** before any one of his brothers, Robert excepted, was married, and a personage of much social and official importance then and thereafter.*

Though a loyalist, he was, like John and John's sons in Lancaster, a dissenter or Puritan and a member of the Old South Church**. Again it would seem to be evidence that he was of the Lancaster family when he goes out of his way to befriend the father's old neighbor and pastor's wife, Mrs. Rowlandson, to the extent of raising eighty pounds for her relief and by giving her shelter for nearly a year after her captivity by the Indians. (See the "Removes of Mrs. Rowlandson.")

Though he was not mentioned in the division of the estate of John† nor in the will of Frances, neither were Catherine and Robert. Doubtless, like them, he had received his portion long before:—perhaps while the family was in Dorchester, now a suburb of Boston, then only four miles distant and the more important place of the two, he received his portion and betook himself to Boston "and grew up with the town."

Mr. Samuel Whitcomb, Jr., in his manuscript letters, says, James owned‡ "a little farm" in Boston where the Tremont House now

One of the four banners carried at the State funeral of Gov. Leverett was borne by James Whetcombe. (Hist. of Boston.)

In 1680 he and his second wife, Elizabeth, and his son James were admitted to membership under the baptismal covenant, and his children James, Jane, Rebecca and William, all but the last, children of his first wife were baptized. His will bears date 7 Nov., 1686."

James' will bequeaths his father's and mother's pictures and mentions Uncle Edward Wyllys' (Sewall, Vol. II., p. 360) Freeman 1-6-69.

† There is a Deed on record in Boston, dated 11 Feb'y, 1672—of a parcel of pasture land—5 acres, adjoining the Town Common, which had been purchased of Rich Truesdale and Thomas Miller by Thomas Deane & Anne, his wife—& sold to James Whitcomb of Boston, Merchant, for £210. It "Butted on the Common southwesterly."

stands and also five acres opposite the Common. This careful annalist seems to have found James specially interesting and mentions him often. He thought he might have returned to England, but later developments show that he spent his life in Boston and that his death occurred there November 23, 1686.

It is an interesting question as to how Edward Wyllis was James' uncle. It was hoped the alleged relationship might discover the maiden name of the wife of John (<sup>1</sup>), but no Frances Wyllis (or Willis) has been found, though research has been thorough. Prof. Shepardson suggests that James may have been John's son by a previous marriage; the suggestion merits consideration when it is remembered that the elder John was born about 1588. The writer has speculated if the relationship to Wyllis were not by his marriage with Rebecca or Elizabeth. Since he gives his father's and mother's pictures to his wife instead of to his son, may they not have been Wyllis instead of Whitcomb pictures? Our autocratic forbears seem to have had a way of giving to their wives what nowadays the wives have without the giving, as witness in James' will the disposal of "the childbed linen, her necklaces, etc." This will, which is a document of unusual interest, follows this sketch.

No dates of James' marriage to either wife are yet found, nor is the date of the death of Rebecca known, but Judge Sewall in his Diary mentions the funeral of Elizabeth (Aug. 20, 1712), in a way that shows the ceremonial to have been conducted with much state*.

JOHN WHITCOMB,<sup>2</sup> (John,<sup>1</sup>) was born in England and has been regarded as the oldest son of John<sup>1</sup>. That he bore his father's name is not conclusive evidence of his primogeniture, for, though naming the oldest son for the father was a custom that obtained among the middle-class English, the Whitcombs, judging from the Harleian manuscripts, formed an exception to the rule. John and James would seem to have been the two oldest sons but, for reasons given in a foregoing sketch, James' birth is believed to have been earlier than John's. As to which was older and stronger in the father's sympathy and confidence there can be no doubt.

John Senior and John Junior appear to have been very closely associated in business and in the family life. Their signatures are found together in several places;—once as early as 1652 when they signed the town covenant of Lancaster; they appear together again in 1653 among those who had a right to become residents of Lancaster within a year, and in 1654-5 they are both among the "twentie families" named in the petition for a township drawn and signed by John Senior.

John Jr., seems to have been, in an intimate and special way, the trusted son of his parents and the good steady-going, helpful, elder brother to the household of younger children. He remained unmarried until his brothers and sisters were settled in homes of their own, and for the nine years of his mother's widowhood one may think of him as her faithful adviser, and helper.

His real estate in Lancaster consisted of a "home lott" containing twenty acres which adjoined his father's homestead and an "enter-vail" lot of fifteen and one-half acres. Following the death of John

JOHN WHITCOMB JUNIOR.

Sr., in 1662, the real estate was divided and the father's home lot was assigned to John and Jonathan jointly, while the home lot of John Jr., was allotted to the two youngest sons, Job and Josiah.

According to Mr. Nourse, John was married May 19, 1669, to Mary ———. Curiously enough this is the very entry made concerning the marriage of Job. Another authority, Savage, in his Genealogical Dictionary, says he was married to Mary ———, January 16, 1671. Concerning his death, the following is quoted from the Middlesex Court Files:

Vpon ye 7th of April 1683 Lancaster A jury of Inquest was Caled to give in thier virdict concerning ye vntimely death of John Whetcomb, we whose names are onderwriten doe by what we understand by ye brother of ye deceased by name Jonathan Whitcombe and one more by name George huse who was standing on ye shore and saw how ye said John Whitcombe felle into ye water, do here vnanimously giue in our virdict thus, that ye said John Whitcomb and Jonathan Whitcomb beng bringing some hay ouer ye riuer vpon two canoes indeavoring to pull them ouer by a rope which was fastened to a bough at ye riuer side, but ye canoes sinking ye said John Whitcombe falling into ye riuer was by a prouidence of god drowned in pennecuk riuer ye 7th of this instant Aprill.

Events proved that Robert, like his brother-in-law, Rhodolphus Ellmes, and his neighbors, Gen. Cudworth and family, sympathized with the Quakers and possibly his inclinations led him to remain with these friends rather than to accompany his Puritan relatives to Lancaster. It is certain that six years later he was married<sup>n</sup> by a Quaker preacher in Rhode Island to Mary (born July 23, 1637), daughter of Gen. James Cudworth.* but this marriage being pronounced unlawful he was remarried by a Puritan preacher, March 9, 1660.

Robert Whitcombe was the first to settle at "Beechwood" in the Beeches, the family place at Scituate where several generations of Whitcombes have resided.

He seems to have died intestate and there is no record of his children except in the will of Gen. James Cudworth, who left legacies to four grandchildren. Another child, Elizabeth, is named elsewhere. Dates of the death of Robert and his wife are unknown at this writing (1903).

*The following is an account of a wedding in 1765 told by Mrs. Job Whitcomb, then a girl of 14 years; it is taken from the diary of Marshal Pratt, a grandson of John Pratt, the bridegroom:

"A company of young men came out through the woods riding upon horses, each one having his girl sitting behind him on the pillion. They paraded in front of the house of the groom, and my beau, Joseph Whitcomb, rode his horse up to the bars. I climbed up on the bars and mounted the pillion behind him. John Pratt, the bridegroom, came out of the house and dressed with a three-square cocked hat, white coat with black glass buttons, knee breeches with buckles, up to the fashion. I wore for a bonnet, a dark hat with a low crown, wide rim, a broad red ribbon tied around it, with two long bows. The bridegroom mounted his horse, rode single to the head of the company and the rest followed, two abreast. We went down by the Cohasset meeting-house, up Deer Hill Lane (Sohier Street) to Mr. Daniel Tower's house on King Street, where the bride lived. We had a splendid wedding and the couple came to live in the groom's own house next to his father's."

55 ASA WHITCOMB,<sup>5</sup> (Nathaniel,<sup>4</sup> James,<sup>3</sup> Robert,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) removed about 1742 from Rochester, Mass., to Hardwick, Mass., where he enlisted for service in the "Old French War," being a member of the company commanded by Capt. Paul Mandell, which took part in the Crown Point Expedition from September 20 to December 5, 1756; he was a member of Capt. Joseph Warner's company, which, August 9, 1757, marched as far as Kinderhook, N. Y., for the relief of Fort William Henry, and he was in Abercrombie's army when it was defeated at Ticonderoga, July 8, 1758. He sold a good farm in Hardwick, Mass., in 1774 for continental paper money and, soon after, moved to Vermont, going first to Woodstock, of which he was selectman in 1774. He was still in Woodstock, April 4, 1777, but soon removed to Barnard, Vt., his family being the second family there. He was agent of the proprietors for the sale of the land, and induced a large number of his relations and neighbors from Hardwick, Mass., to move to Barnard, so many, indeed, that on the organization of the town all the principal officers were, with a single exception, Hardwick men. He was selectman, 1778, first Justice of the Peace, 1778, Representative, 1779. He may have removed to Stockbridge in 1784-5, being chosen Representative in 1797. On his headstone in Barnard is the following inscription:

TOMBSTONE OF ASA WHITCOMB AT BARNARD, VT.

THE ROBERT LINE.

In memory of Asa Whitcomb, Esq.
Who ended his career of usefulness
March 31, A. D. 1812
In the 78th year of his age.

"He was one of the framers of the Constitution of this State; one of the first settlers of this town, and a main pillow of its infant settlement; and, during the struggle for independence, was a firm supporter of the cauce of his country."

A smaller stone near by marks the grave of his wife, on which the first part of the inscription reads as follows :

"Here lies my wife,
Life of my life,
And children that I will name,
And if they're gone to distant worlds,
My love is still the same.—
Anthony, Asa Barnard, Joanna and Benjamin are in their graves.
Wrote by Asa Whitcomb, Esq., A. D. 1809."

He was a muscular man with features indicating great energy of character. He made some improvements in Stockbridge but dared not remove there on account of the Indians, who killed his cattle there at the time they came to Barnard. They seem to have been seeking him to avenge the act of another man named Whitcomb, "Major Ben," who ambushed and shot a British officer in Canada, during the French War; Asa Whitcomb working at Stockbridge on the frontier, was taken to be the man, and when the Indians found no one in the town they came to Barnard, where they captured three prisoners, Wright, Newton and Haskell and took them off to Canada, believing Asa

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

Whitcomb to be one of their captives. At another time Asa Whitcomb was visited by three men from Canada, one of whom he knew to be a tory. They came in the guise of hunters, but he, suspecting that they were after him, planned to escape. He quietly summoned three neighbors named Lurvey, who lived together, telling them to come for life as he was beset by tories. He damped the pans of their guns, got a good, stout warclub, and when they had eaten a good dinner, placed himself between them and the door, told them they were his prisoners as the house was surrounded and death would be the fate of the first man who resisted. They finally surrendered on his promise to treat them as prisoners of war. The Lurveys took charge of them and delivered them to the American garrison at Charleston.

Immediately after the Revolution Asa Whitcomb made a journey alone to Ohio, traveling as far as he could with safety from the hostile Indians. In 1806 when his sons, John and Anthony, removed to Ohio, he went with them, and then proceeded alone to St. Louis and back to Ohio. On his return he passed through a desert prairie where there were no inhabitants for a hundred and fifty miles. Family tradition says that at this time he bought much of the land now occupied by the city of St. Louis. His paper money, the pledge of the pauper government, proving valueless he became penniless in his old age. He had a remarkable memory, and a mind stored with valuable matter, calculated to interest and amuse people of different ages and sexes. He was quite musically inclined. He had a fund of humor and sometimes expressed his thoughts in rhyme. On one occasion when the wife of a friend was giving vent to her impatience, he gravely asked the friend what he thought of Dr. Humgrum's prayer:

"Ye gods, ye gave to me a wife,
Out of your wanted favor.
To be the comfort of my life,
And I was glad to have her.
But, if your Mightiness divine
For higher ends design her,
Into your hand at any time,
I'm ready to resign her."

THE ROBERT LINE.

His friend replied, "I think he spoke like a Christian and a man of sense, too."

Asa Whitcomb was married March 15, 1759, to Joanna Raymond, who was born in Rochester, Mass., May 11, 1740, and died in 1809.

*Rhoda Whitcomb Briggs was reared in the Calvinistic faith of her father and became a member of the Congregational Church of Barnard on the day of its organization and had her children all baptized there, but hearing Hosea Ballou preach, she became a Universalist. She was twice officially admonished by the Congregational Church and finally had a church trial in which she plead her own cause; she was dismissed or left and "joined" the Universalists. She was a close and intelligent Bible student and the divines of her acquaintance often measured swords with her. On one occasion a Congregational pastor from a neighboring town asked her to give her idea of the Deity. "Certainly, sir; after you." He then pictured a God of vengeance, justice and mercy, to the elect, and quoted Dr. Watts' hymn, two stanzas of which are given below:

Far in the deep where darkness dwells,
The land of horror and despair;
Justice has built a dismal hell,
And laid her stores of vengeance there.

There guilty ghosts of Adam's race
Shriek out, and howl beneath thy rod;
Once they could scorn a Saviour's grace,
But they incensed a dreadful God.

"Now, said he, "let me hear your idea." "Well," she answered with a sigh, "Your God is my devil."

In person she was tall and rather spare, with regular features and a decidedly intellectual cast of countenance, strongly resembling her father. She died at the home of her son, Asa Barnard, whose home was her home after the death of her husband. (Gleaned from family papers by C. W.)

Indians and went back to Hardwick, Mass.; later he returned to Barnard with his wife, and Mrs. Olive Durkee says that many times she has heard her grandmother Lydia say "That at one time she was the handsomest woman in Barnard for she was the only woman there at the time." In 1778 he was a member of the "Committee of Safety," as the first town meeting was called. He died April 7, 1797, and his wife February 22, 1831, both in Stockbridge, Vt. His grave is the oldest in Stockbridge Common burying ground.

Inscription on Lot Whitcomb's Tombstone:

"Remember me as you pass by,
For once I was like you;
For as I am, so must you be,
And so prepare to follow me."

THE ROBERT LINE.

"Just inside the moats at Fort Gaspereau (now Moncton) is the old military graveyard with many red-sandstone tombstones still standing with their rude carvings and simple inscriptions; on one of them is written:

James Whitecombe
Killed by the Indians,
July 24, 1755.
Aet. 23 years.

In 1875 the Government of New Brunswick erected a monumental tombstone to the memory of the Fort Moncton men who were slain by the Indians and French and the name of James Whitecombe is among the number." (Boston Transcript, Nov. 26, 1892.)

ville, Washington County, N. Y., where Scottoway was assessor in 1788. The records of the War Department at Washington, show that Scottoway Whitcomb served in the Revolutionary War as an ensign in Capt. Isaac Bolster's Company of the Third Regiment of Continental troops, commanded by Col. Ebenezer Learned. His name also appears with rank given as quartermaster. His enlistment in this company ended December 31, 1776. He served again as quartermaster in Col. Danforth Keyes' Massachusetts Regiment, having been commissioned June 27, 1777, for six months. He served again as a lieutenant in Capt. Joel Green's company in Col. Ezra Wood's Regiment of Massachusetts Militia, beginning June, 1778, and ending January, 1779. Both Scottoway and Mary were buried in Granville.

He was married to Eunice Sheldon in 1763. She was born in Massachusetts and died in Bolton, Vt., June 24, 1828.

He enlisted for the Revolutionary War, February 2, 1776, Capt. Stoddard's Company, Col. Burrall's Regiment. He was sergeant in the company of Capt. Matthew Smith of Gen. David Waterbury's Regiment in 1781. "In March, 1781, Brig. Gen. Waterbury, Jr., was appointed commander of the battalion ordered to be raised for the defense of the post at Horseneck and places adjacent, and also all the guards raised for the defense of the sea coasts from Horseneck to New Haven inclusive. The force was composed of drafts from the militia *Polly Whitcomb was a spirited and beautiful girl and Benjamin Bishop, like herself, was popular far and near. They were married at Fay's Corners, a part of Richmond, Vt. Robert Whitcomb lived in a log house, sufficiently commodious for his own large family, but not large enough to accommodate the many friends that had been invited to the wedding from miles around, and as the ceremony was about to begin a shout arose: "Bring them out and put them on the piled wood, so we can all see them married." So the minister and the couple were placed on the piled wood and the marriage was solemnized to the satisfaction of the assembled neighbors. Saul Bishop, the son of my great aunt Polly, told me this story, and said it could be verified by people then living, and he gave me names which I am sorry I did not write down.—W. H. S. W.

This couple presently opened a tavern in Richmond but later removed to Burlington and became proprietors of "Bishop's," for years a popular hostelry, later known as "The Howard House," and still standing. "When Gen. Lafayette visited America the last time Bishop's had the honor of conveying the nation's guest from Burlington to Montpelier. The equipage, commodious enough for the President and his cabinet, was resplendent with new paint and gilding, and was drawn by six cream white horses, and the most famous whip of all the countryside was on the box." HOMESTEAD OF CAPTAIN JACOB WHITCOMB, SPRINGFIELD, VT., BUILT 1798.

Grandfather's house is standing yet, so mossy, old and brown,
On the hill-side where 'tis sunniest, a mile above the town,
In front the door-stone, broad and flat, is firm beneath the feet,
And seems with solid heartiness, all comers-in to greet.
The old south rooms, so pleasant, with their windows low and wide,
Still catch the joyful sunshine, streaming in on either side.
The pasture, up the hillside, shows its zigzag fence of rails,
Its blithesome birds and berries wild, its spring that never fails,
And every year, in autumn-time, thro' sunshine and thro' rain,
The old oak scatters soberly, its acorns in the lane.

[Written by Capt. Jacob's granddaughter, Eliza Woodbury.]

his marriage in 1798 to Priscilla Litchfield of Scituate. They settled in the western part of the town on a farm where they lived the rest of their lives. For more than fifty years he drove sheep and cattle to Brighton market, and, as a drover, was well known to the farmers and stock raisers of Eastern Vermont. In the early days he often carried money from Boston to the Charlestown, N. H., Bank, the stage coaches being avoided because of danger from highwaymen. No one ever thought of the drover's rusty saddle bags as a hiding place for money, and Mr. Whitcomb's own honesty was undoubted. His wife was born in Scituate in 1780 and died July 15, 1843. ## THE ROBERT LINE.

141 JOHN WHITCOMB,<sup>6</sup> (Asa,<sup>5</sup> Nathaniel,<sup>4</sup> James,<sup>3</sup> Robert,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) seems to have moved from Barnard to Stockbridge, Vt., where he was one of the first selectmen of the town. He was a private in the Revolutionary War under three different commands, his term of service aggregating about nine and one-half months. In 1792 he was elected first representative. He was a very social man and thought nothing of going a dozen miles in his sleigh to spend the evening with friends. He had only a common school education but was well-informed in many lines. He was a member of the Vermont Constitutional Convention in 1793. He lived a while in Rochester, Vt., and in 1806 with his brother Anthony, he moved to Ohio. Cincinnati then being a small place of 1150 inhabitants. He was married to Lydia Parmenter of Stockbridge, Vt. He died in Chillicothe, Ohio. She died at Mr. Taylor's house, six miles south of Lafayette, Ind., and was buried in the Hickory Grove Cemetery in Tippecanoe County, Ind.

He was called "Captain Lot," having served with distinction in the war of 1812. His sword that he carried at the battle of Plattsburg is in the possession of his grandson, Mr. N. L. Sheldon, an attorney of Boston. Capt. Lot Whitcomb was a close friend of the Hon. Elias Keyes who was one of the three first settlers of Stockbridge, a man prominent in public affairs and a member of Congress. A receipt which passed between them has been preserved and reads as follows: "This certifies that all book accounts and notes and receipts which has been made between us previous to the first day of April, 1828, is all settled and no more to be looked over again.

Elias Keyes
Lot Whitcomb."

Capt. Whitcomb was "licensed for keeping a House of Public Entertainment in Stockbridge." The portrait which is shown on another page represents him at the age of ninety-two. He died August 5, 1867, and his wife died April 18, 1858, aged eighty.

*Polly Whitcomb of Bolton, Vt., married a descendant of the hero of the following incident, which has been handed down from father to son ever since it occurred in 1725. It has been given the writer for insertion here. (C. W.)

'Dea. Isaac Jones was one of the first from the Massachusetts Bay Colony to take up a homestead among the Green Mountains. 'He stood six feet four inches, barefoot; weighed 250 pounds and was strong accordin'.' Soon after he emigrated north he needed a caldron kettle with which to make soft soap, and went five miles through the woods to borrow one of a settler.

'He carried the kettle by putting it on his head, bottom side up, with the prongs or legs, of course, extending upwards. As he could look only on the ground he had to take it off occasionally to get his bearings and to rest, so that dusk found him still some distance from his clearing and his cabin. Suddenly, without noise or warning of any kind, he was forced to the earth by a tremendous blow on the kettle, and found himself under the iron cage with his legs extended on the ground in front. As soon as he could collect his scattered senses he summoned all his strength and got out from under the greatly increased weight of the kettle to find a huge catamount impaled upon one of its legs. The animal had leaped from the branch of a tree upon the kettle as it was borne along below, mistaking it for a new kind of prey, and one of its legs had penetrated a vital part, killing the creature instantly.'

This incident forms part of a sketch in the "Vermonteer" for February, 1904.

Among the oldest houses standing in the town is this Whitcomb place. The records of the town are somewhat faulty and some of the items below may be wrong. of great personal beauty. She died aged 82 without illness or premonitory symptoms of any kind. When a very young girl she went to assist in the household of her uncle James, who kept a flourishing stage house in Bolton, Vt. With her first earnings and quite unadvised, she bought a pig and carried it home in her apron. Mrs. Kingsbury when 80 years old told the writer that no achievement in her long and successful life made her so proud as this contribution to the needs of the family who had just settled in a log house in the Bolton woods. She said, "There were two heroines of the occasion, the handsome pig and happy I." Of her four children the oldest is Rev. Dr. Kingsbury, for 27 consecutive years pastor of the First Church of Bradford, Mass. Another son is J. B. Kingsbury, M. D., of Holbrook, and a third Frederick L. Kingsbury, M. D., a missionary physician to Bulgaria. Ellen, the only daughter, was the wife of Rev. Eugene Ranslow of Swanton, Vt. The third daughter of Robert, Mary A., had the executive ability of her sisters, while her wide sympathies and generous impulses made her very lovable. Her oldest son, Henry Josiah, was killed in the Battle of the Wilderness; another son, Osmond Byron, has long been organist and choirmaster in leading Episcopal churches in Minneapolis while, in the same city, the youngest son, George Willis Bass, M. D., is a successful physician. (C. W.)

*Mrs. Vesta Whitcomb Walker's daughter Mary, generally known as Dr. Mary Walker, was married to Dr. Miller, but for good and sufficient reasons was granted a divorce from him. While she lived with him she wrote her name Dr. Miller Walker.

She was very active during the Civil War, doing all she could for the soldiers; was taken prisoner and confined in Castle Thunder, Richmond, for five months in hot weather, and nearly died from starvation and the horrors of vermin of various kinds, heat and the close confinement. On one occasion when she was allowed to take a little exercise in the yard, she picked a few bean leaves and ate them; she said they tasted delicious. At the end of five months she was exchanged for a tall rebel sergeant."—V. A. W.

He was also stationed at New York City and at Oswego on Lake Ontario. For many years he commanded the Revenue Cutter at Boston. He was in command of the United States Revenue Cutter "Morris" when Anthony Burns, a fugitive slave, was conveyed on her from Boston harbor back to the South during tremendous excitement. Capt. Whitcomb was not proud of this achievement and doubtless would not have cared to have it recorded but he was acting under orders and it is to his credit that though the task was not of his choosing he performed it faithfully. Capt. Whitcomb was in the Revenue Cutter service over forty-two years, and was distinguished for his attention to his duties, which included the assistance of vessels in distress during the winter months. He was married in 1825 to Abigail Parker Clapp of Boston, daughter of Salmi and Abigail (Munroe) Clapp, and named for Abigail Parker, mother of Abigail Munroe. She was born January 25, 1804. After her husband's death in Boston, December 25, 1861, she passed through the lines to her son in Richmond, Va.

THE ROBERT LINE.

The home of the Whitcombs was the famous and historic "Old Garrison House" of Indian War days, built in 1728, and known as the oldest house in Yarmouth. It was beautiful in its situation on the bank of Royall's River, with its long avenue of massive elms leading up to the homestead, and was known far and wide for the warm-hearted hospitality of Levi Whitcomb, and for the lovely character and sweet nature of his wife Sarah. Stranger, as well as friend, was ever sure of a welcome.

Levi Whitcomb was a member of the First Congregational Church in Yarmouth, of which he was elected deacon, February 6, 1856. He was deeply interested in the activities of this church and in the religious life of the community. His devout Christian home-life has been touchingly mentioned by Rev. Dr. E. K. Alden in his Memoirs, in which he speaks of the "prayer closet, substantially made of plain boards, known as the little chamber to which the devout parents retired for devotion."

Levi Whitcomb died respected and beloved by all who knew him, and was buried in the old churchyard by the side of Sarah, his wife. His sons and daughters are all dead, yet the spot, where the old homestead stood, remains as a cherished legacy in the possession of his oldest grandson, bearing the family name.

It is related by the Hon. Solomon Lincoln in an article published April 11, 1879, in the Hingham Journal, that Mr. Whitcomb had not passed his minority when, his feelings being aroused by the conduct of Great Britain towards this country, he entered with ardent zeal upon the defense of Mr. Madison's administration. To illustrate his spirit, he says, "In a conversation with Ensign Lincoln of Lincoln & Edwards, publishers at Boston, Mr. Whitcomb insisted that President Madison was doing his duty to his country, whereupon Mr. Lincoln said, 'Young man you favor the war so you ought to enlist.' 'I'll do it, sir,' replied young Whitcomb, and went right off and enlisted." He joined the Infantry and marched to Pittsfield, Mass., thence to Lake Champlain, where he was in service for several months during that winter. In later life he was a pensioner of the war of 1812. In October 10, 1817, Mr. Whitcomb married Mrs. Mary (Simonds) Joy of Boston.

At this date the "Publick Document and State Papers" were published at Boston by Thomas B. Wait & Sons. During the years 1818-1822 Mr. Whitcomb was employed by them to travel west and south as agent for the sale of these works. This brought him in contact with the public and professional men of that day, among whom we may mention Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson, upon whom he called at their homes in Monticello, Va., and Nashville, Tenn.; William Wirt, Cave Johnson, Felix Grundy, James Madison, Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, and many others. His subscription book, now in possession of the writer, contains the autographs of several hundred persons, who were at some time of their lives distinguished among the country's notable men.

It may be mentioned that Mrs. Whitcomb with a young son journeyed with her husband, traveling wholly by private conveyance, a tandem team which they drove from Boston, across the great state of Pennsylvania over the "National turnpike" via Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Wheeling, Va., crossing the Ohio at Marietta, thence via Cincinnati, down the Ohio into Kentucky and Tennessee as far south as Huntsville, Ala. While at Murfreesboro, Tenn., the child died and was buried in Col. Ready's lot at Readyville. Journeying north and west they took up their abode at Greenville, Ill., where Mrs. Whitcomb lived for months in a log house, while her husband prosecuted his work in the south and west. Here their eldest daughter "Harriet Newell" was born. A reference to Mr. Whitcomb's diary of events and places, of personal interviews and experience would be of interest, as he was a close and careful observer of men and things, but they cannot be introduced here. On their trip back to New England and by the same means of conveyance, they visited Fort Dearborn, now Chicago and Niagara Falls, and thence down the Erie Canal to the Hudson river and across Massachusetts to Boston.

THE ROBERT LINE.

At this time Mr. Whitcomb had traveled more or less extensively in twenty-two of the states, and by such limited means of conveyance as was afforded at that early date. He was deeply interested in the Internal Improvements of the country. An interview with Gov. Clinton of New York and his engineer led him to propose the building of a canal from Boston to Albany, there to connect with Gov. Clinton, or the Erie Canal. His articles which were published in the Boston Recorder (in 1824) were regarded as visionary, but he soon learned of English tramways, and urged the building of railroads, writing the first articles published on this subject. He was a frequent and vigorous writer on railroads and was especially interested in the routes through Vermont and northern New York.

In 1825 he entered the Boston Custom House and was Foreign Entry Clerk for many years. He was clerk in the second comptroller's office, United States Treasury at Washington, and in 1841 was sent on a secret service by the Revenue Department along the borders of the Canadas and the Provinces. He was in 1845 the Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal. In 1851 he acted as assistant Marshall in taking the census for Vermont.

From 1829 to 1836, while living at Dorchester, he championed the High and Graded School System, being in correspondence with the best authorities and minds in the country having the support of Edward Everett, Horace Mann and others. In 1846-1848 he had charge of an agency at Boston for supplying teachers for the south and west. Gov. Slade of Vermont was made the President of the agency.

Mr. Whitcomb with seven children moved to Springfield, Vt., September, 1836, and one child was born there. Most of his time prior to 1850, was spent at Washington, after which he settled down in retirement with his family. While interested in all town and public affairs, especially during the war of the Rebellion, he evaded official life, preferring to use his pen in advocacy of those measures in which he had so long been interested. In politics he was a whig in early life, and an ardent Republican in all his later years. Mr. Whitcomb

At the age of twenty-four he was united in marriage with Lucy Ann Nash of Weymouth, daughter of Captain Nash, who was captain of the first vessel to enter the Chinese ports. When first married they resided on Union street, Randolph, in the house now (1903) occupied by Daniel Elliot. In 1840 he built the house on South Main Street where he afterwards lived.

Mr. Whitcomb was a musician of much note all his life. For many years he played double bass in the First Congregational church, where his father played for years before him. He was a member of that church for over fifty years. He was a member of the old Bellini musical club, and belonged to the old Stoughton musical society and for many years played in the orchestra at its Christmas concerts.

When a young man he was active in fire matters, for a number of years being foreman of the Fire King engine company, and was the first fire engineer appointed by the town.

He outlived his wife several years and died April 18, 1902, aged ninety-one. No children.

*His brother David thus describes one of them: "I well remember the first school we went to after we came west. We had moved out into the country, seven miles from the city (Cincinnati) and went to school in a log house, three miles from home, most of the way being through the woods. Our school was kept by an Irishman named Armstrong. His literary attainments were small, but he had a kind heart and kept what was called a noisy school, allowing the scholars to pursue their studies at the top of their voices. He seldom used the rod, though he always kept one in his school room, and when he did use it, I must do him justice to say that he used it with great impartiality, for when he felt compelled to use it he usually took the scholars in course, and gave each a blow as he was seated. Of his eminent virtues and sobriety I would also speak and record to his honor that he never got drunk, only on every other Saturday and Sunday, although I think he never failed on those days. He was not the best example of teacher, but the chances of even a common education were small to the poor of that day."

The above note and the following extracts are introduced here as it is believed they will suitably supplement Prof. Shepardson's sketch and throw additional light on the character and career of this able and beloved Governor of Indiana. (C. W.)

In "Early Trials and Sketches of Indiana," on p. 79, a writer says: "In the winter of 1823, as I was about to leave Indianapolis for home, James Whitcomb told me he was made man. While other boys played he read books, becoming a good mathematician, a superior grammarian and capable of understanding Latin and Greek, while he read French with fluency and ease. He told Ex-Governor Porter that most of his reading was done by the light of hickory bark torches. He collected a library of over 5,000 titles, which at his death, was the largest and best selected private library in Indiana. His will gave it to Indiana Asbury University (Depauw). He studied law in Transylvania University, Kentucky, and later continued his studies while teaching in Fayette County. He was admitted to the bar of that county in March, 1822. January 1, 1824, he began practice in Bloomington, Ind. In 1826 he was appointed by Governor James B. Ray, prosecuting attorney for the Fifth Judicial Court, filling this place until 1830, when he was elected State going to Ohio, and wished to travel with me; of course, I was glad to have company as the path led through the woods and there were but three houses between Indianapolis and Whitewater. After an early breakfast we started, both riding good horses intending to reach Dille's on Blue River, near where Knightstown now stands. Some hours after night, to our much joy we saw the light at the cabin, rode up, and as we dismounted, the sound of a fiddle saluted us. Entering the cabin, there sat before the fire a lame young man, named Amos Dille, with an old violin in his hand, scraping away, making anything but music. He laid the violin on the bed, and started with our horses to the stable. As he closed the door Mr. Whitcomb took it up, soon put it in tune, and when Amos returned, was playing light and beautiful airs. Amos took his seat by me seemingly entranced, and as Mr. Whitcomb struck up 'Hail Columbia' he sprang to his feet. 'If I had $50 I would give it all for that fiddle; I never heard such music in my life.' After playing several tunes Mr. Whitcomb laid the instrument on the bed. Amos seized it, carried it to the fire, where he could see it, turned it over and over, examined every part and sang out, 'Mister, I never saw two fiddles so much alike as yours and mine.' Governor Whitcomb was one of the finest performers on the violin I ever heard."

Extracts from "Biographical and Historical Sketches of Early Indiana," by W. W. Woolen, pp. 81-93. "While in the Senate Mr. Whitcomb participated largely in the debates of that body, and during most of the time was chairman of the Judiciary Committee. In October, 1836, Gen. Jackson appointed him Commissioner of the General Land Office and the next year in June he was re-appointed by Van Buren. The land grants being mainly in French and Spanish, he studied both and qualified himself to read them with facility. * * * He entered his office of Governor with the state loaded down with debt upon which no interest had been paid for years; he left it with the debt adjusted and the state's credit restored. Half the debt was paid by transfer of the Wabash and Erie Canal; the other half by bonds bearing a low rate of interest. He organized promptly five regiments for the Mexican war. Besides being an inveterate user of snuff, Mr. W. was addicted to smoking. But his habits of economy were such that when his cigar was so far consumed, that he could no longer manipulate it with his fingers, he would insert a pin in the stump to hold Senator. In 1836 he was appointed, by President Jackson, Superintendent of the General Land Office, holding this position during all of Van Buren's term. In 1843 he was elected Governor of Indiana by a majority of 2,013, and in 1848 was re-elected by 3,958. Before the expiration of his second term he was chosen United States Senator. He was a prominent Freemason, being the first man Knighted in Indiana. Roper Commandery, K. T., was organized in his house. He was an active Methodist and at the time of his death was vice-president of the American Bible Society. He did not marry until late in life, his wife being Mrs. Martha Ann (Renwick) Hurst of Pickaway County, Ohio. They were married March 24, 1846, and, after a very violent attack of sickness lasting eighteen hours, she died July 17, 1847.

by and thus get all the good (or bad) there was in it. One day he was in the office of Horatio J. Harris, then Auditor of State, when Mr. Harris used a match to light a cigar; "Why didn't you light your cigar by the fire? A man has no right to wantonly destroy a thing of value. A match has its value and the one you used could have been saved," was the rebuke Mr. W. gave him.

His memory was remarkable in most things though it was defective in remembering names. He was a very able lawyer. He used to present the opposite side of the case and then demolish it. He was a member of the Methodist Church and an active worker in its cause. He frequently led in public prayer, and for some time was a class leader in the church. When he died, he was Vice-President of the American Bible Society. (Once in a speech at Newport, Ind., he said, "I like all churches, but I like the Methodist Church best; I like all women, but I like my wife the best.") When his wife died he wrote in the family Bible, "How brief our happy sojourn together." He was compactly and strongly built, and was somewhat above the average size of man; he had dark complexion and black hair, which usually fell in ringlets to his shoulders; his features were good and expressive and his manners most elegant. His appearance was that of a courtier, and in any circle of society he would have been considered a pattern of propriety. He was not a fop but like many other eminent men he had a weakness in that direction. Foibles he had but they were insignificant in comparison with his many virtues. He was a talented and honest man, and when the roll of Indiana's great is made up, among the first will be the name of Whitcomb."

In 1843 he wrote a pamphlet entitled "Facts for the People," which is considered by many one of the most effective arguments against a protective tariff that has ever been written. (Appleton's Enc. of Am. Biog., p. 466.)

Copy of inscription from Monument at Crown Hill Cemetery, Indianapolis, Ind.

"James Whitcomb a native of Vermont. Born December, 1795, brought to Ohio when eleven years old. Self Taught, Commenced practice of law in 1822 at Bloomington, Ind. Was State and Circuit Attorney, State Senator, Commissioner of General Land Office, twice Governor of Indiana. Died October, 1852, at the city of New York, while Senator of United States. Eminent in learning. Devoted to Country and God."

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

In 1852, while United States Senator, he went to New York to undergo a surgical operation and died from the effects, October 4, 1852. He was greatly interested in his family history and had the crest* of the "Whitcomb arms" made into a seal, which he wore on his watch chain. This, with his fine gold watch, was stolen from his dead body by his negro servant.—(Francis W. Shepardson.)

Bishop Foster wrote in 1897 concerning Rev. David Whitcomb as follows: "When I entered the ministry, he was esteemed as one of the most noble and distinguished members of the Ohio Conference. I counted it my good fortune that I fell into his hands (he was Presiding Elder) at an early stage of my ministry. He was a preacher of rare excellence and power; his visits were always hailed by the church and ministers with great delight and profit. As a preacher, he

*Arian Jane Addy, daughter of Caroline E. Whitcomb and George Addy, after studying vocal music in Chicago and Philadelphia, spent eleven years in Paris, where she was under masters in voice culture and studied for grand opera, her mother remaining with her. Her voice developed wonderfully and is of surpassing compass, fullness and sweetness. Her operatic career was never begun owing to her marriage which took place in St. George's chapel, London, in April, 1900. Her husband, Prof. Henryk Arctowski, an explorateur (leader of the Belgian Antarctic Expedition), and savant has been professor in the university in Liege, Belgium. Mme. Arctowska appears in chamber concerts only, but the European press gives her extravagant praise "not less for her beauty and girlish grace than for her marvellous voice which is pure, full, liquid and sweet." He was married in Cambridge, Vt., November 4, 1847, to Anne Bell Felch, daughter of Rev. Cheever Felch, who was a chaplain in the United States Navy and was with Capt. Bainbridge on board the Constitution when he fought and captured the British ship, Java, in the War of 1812. She was born in Dedham, Mass., January 17, 1819. They moved to Pottsdam, N. Y., where he kept store; in June, 1856, they emigrated to Minnesota and presently settled on a homestead in Meeker County. In 1862 he raised a company of 103 men to go to the front, but finding that the Sioux were on the war path, he remained and did notable service as Indian fighter and in defending the settlers in the Indian uprising of 1862. "At the time of the outbreak there was no available force to resist the savages, protect the settlers and check the stampede except Capt. Whitcomb and his gallant company. But for his prompt action there would probably not have been a living white settler in most of the country west of the Twin Cities."—(General L. A. Grant.)

He returned to find his home in ashes, his crops and fences destroyed, and his cattle driven away. And the strange part of it is, that while others were reimbursed for their losses, he received nothing. When the commission was in the state adjusting losses he was away defending the frontier, and could put in no claim.

Early in 1865 Capt. Whitcomb raised another company which was mustered into the United States service and became Company B of Hatch's Battalion. With his command he guarded the frontier from Fort Abercrombie to Fort Pembina and had charge of seven "cantonments," viz., Georgetown, Twin Lake Station, Old Crossing, Pomme de Terre, Chippewa, Alexandria and Sauk Center. After an honorable discharge in 1866 he held offices of trust in Meeker and Douglas Counties and the State and was a member of the Territorial Pioneers of Minnesota. He was a genial and lovable man; was a rhymester and a capital raconteur. Died in Minneapolis, June 18, 1891. His widow and daughter reside together in Minneapolis.

*Permelia Maria Whitcomb (Howard), when she married James Bucklin, removed with him to Minnesota, where there were around them two hundred Indians and less than half a dozen white families. During the early days they encountered many hardships. They settled off the main road and had to travel eighty miles with oxen for their provisions, and had some hairbreadth escapes from Indians. At one time fourteen Indians were in their log house and, taking offence at some trifle, each began to sharpen a murderous weapon. August 21, 1883, a terrible cyclone destroyed their house, barn, granary and all out buildings except a brick smoke-house. "We heard the roar and saw approaching the funnel shaped mass of destruction, which was a raging battle within itself. There was no time to lose. We took refuge in the cellar. In a few seconds the cyclone struck our house, carrying away the roof. When we entered the cellar our home was all right; the tempest gave us about four strikes which demolished everything inside and out; when we came out in fifteen minutes, all was gone except the floor piled with debris, and around where our home once was, was a confused mass of brick and mortar, stones, pianos (two), chairs, tables, crockery, etc., etc., broken in pieces of all sizes, some ground to very powder. It is not in the power of human tongue to describe so wretched a picture." (Extract from a letter from Mrs. Bucklin.)

He was graduated from Bowdoin College, Class of 1847, and elected Civil Engineering as his profession. In 1849 he removed to Virginia and for twenty-five years was in the employ of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad which he built through the Virginia mountains. In 1854 he was made Superintendent of transportation and in 1855 Chief Engineer. In 1861 was made General Superintendent as well, and held both positions until 1870 when he resigned the superintendency. The extension of the railway through the Alleghanies to the Ohio River, was made under his supervision as Chief Engineer and completed in 1873. In 1874 he was appointed by the President, General Grant, a member of the United States Commission to determine the plan for improving the mouths of the Mississippi River—carried out afterwards by Capt. J. B. Eads as Contractor. At the same time he was in charge of the improvement of the James River, Virginia, as assistant engineer. This he resigned in 1880 to engage in railway work in Virginia and West Virginia. He was again placed in charge of James River Improvement in 1893 and remained until 1900. While in Europe some years ago he secured a painting of the Whitcomb coat-of-arms. It was copied from the Chancel window of the parish church in the Whitcomb parish in County Dorset, England. Several months were spent on this trip, and when he returned home to Yarmouth, some five years had been spent on the sea. He then learned the trade of a ship carpenter and builder, which trade he followed all his life. He worked two years in Thomaston, Me., where he was married, September 10, 1856, to Amelia H. Stackpole, who was born in Thomaston, Me. After his marriage, he lived in Thomaston, then removed to Provincetown, Mass., where he was engaged in the wrecking business for five years, returning to Thomaston in 1873.

Samuel Whitcomb was an upright man; hard-working and industrious by nature and habit. Beginning with nothing of this world's goods, he battled against the adversities of life, and was able to leave his family a comfortable legacy at his decease. He died October 2, 1896. ## THE ROBERT LINE.

While still a youth he went to Thomaston, Me., where he learned the trade of ship carpenter in the employ of his uncle, William Stetson, a noted builder of that period. For several consecutive years, prior to the outbreak of the Civil War, his winters were spent in the forests of Virginia cutting ship timber, while his summers were passed in the shipyards at Thomaston, Me.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he and his company of men were hard at work in the Virginia forests. A party of Confederate soldiers led by Fitz Hugh Lee visited the scene of wood cutting, took the entire party into custody, and conducted it to Richmond, where the members were held for a time as spies. It was only by the rarest good fortune that the men were able to disprove the charge, gain freedom, and secure safe conduct through the troubled districts to friendly soil.

Mr. Whitcomb was married in Saint George, Me., on July 1, 1856, to Mary Jane Fountain. For a short time after marriage they lived in Saint George, while the husband worked at his trade at Tennant's Harbor and then removed to Thomaston, Me. As a result of the Civil War, the ship building industry in Maine was practically ruined, and Mr. Whitcomb and his family moved to Boston, where his services were sought by managers of large ship building interests in East Boston and Quincy, Mass. While filling a responsible position in an East Boston shipyard in 1865, he was induced to remove to Provincetown, Mass., to superintend the working of a large marine railway and to build vessels for the whaling and codfishing industries. Although intending to make but a temporary stay in that place, he nevertheless became greatly interested in the business and public interests of the town, and remained there until his death, in 1901.

Mr. Whitcomb built at Provincetown the following vessels: Schooner Alcyone, in 1866; Schooner Cora Morrison, 1867; Schooner Freddie W. Alton, 1867; Brig D. A. Small, 1868; Schooner Lotta Bell, 1869; Schooner Willie L. Swift, 1875, and Yacht Charlotte, 1901. While building the Schooner F. W. Alton, he cut timber on the sandy hills of Cape Cod, on account of the difficulty of obtaining material for the construction of the vessel. He was frequently urged to build other vessels during these years on account of his reputation for skill and trustworthiness, but declined these offers on account of difficulties in transportation of material, preferring to devote his entire time to the large and profitable business of repairing, as Provincetown was a prominent harbor of refuge for disabled vessels.

Mr. Whitcomb earnestly identified himself with the religious, social, and public interests of Provincetown. Although a member of the Baptist Church in Thomaston, Me., he became at once an active worker in the Centre Methodist Church,—the former denomination not being represented in Provincetown,—and for years he was Superintendent of the Sunday School, and Chairman of the Parish Committee. He was a prominent member of the Fire Department, being captain of the Ulysses Engine Company, and later for many years—almost until his death,—an engineer in the Department. He was a member of King Hiram Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and of Joseph Warren Royal Arch Chapter of Masons in Provincetown.

The death of his loving and devoted wife, a woman of strong character, wide sympathies, and affectionate nature, which occurred October 11, 1895, was a severe blow to him and marked the beginning of the gradual breakdown of his own health.

In the summer of 1900, he began the construction of the "Charlotte," a large schooner yacht, one of the most ambitious building contracts he had ever undertaken. He also entered into a contract with the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company to erect twenty masts, each 212 feet high, for the Wireless Telegraph Station at South Wellfleet, Mass., during the spring and summer of 1901, while the yacht was under construction. These large undertakings illustrate the enthusiasm, ambition and tireless energy which characterized his life, but the mental and physical labor involved were too much for his failing strength, and with these contracts barely finished, he passed away suddenly on September 8, 1901, at his home in Provincetown. He lies buried in Thomaston, Me., by the side of his wife. The following is quoted from a tribute to his memory:

"A noble Christian life came to its earthly ending, when on Sabbath morning, September 8, Mr. John G. Whitcomb of Provincetown, Mass., was found by members of his household to be sleeping the sleep that knows no human waking. The quiet harbor-town was profoundly moved as the tidings stole through it, that the loved neighbor and friend had crossed the bar, for every one knew him, respected him, trusted him, loved him."

As a public official whose duties are often very delicate and perplexing, and not infrequently perilous, he was as alert and brave as he was kind and generous. He was a citizen of much public spirit and enterprise, was a prominent Freemason, and was connected with many and various organizations. Had been an active member of Centre Methodist Episcopal Church of Provincetown since 1872. He was especially kind to the poor and the unfortunate and no worthy hand went empty from his door. "He was a loyally good man. His life stands a splendid testimony, an enduring monument to honor, industry, integrity, courtesy, fidelity and christian charity."

He was married (1) April 10, 1870, to Susan E. Knowles, daughter of Robert Knowles. She was born in Provincetown October 21,

His early education began in the district school and was continued in the Wesleyan Seminary situated at Springfield, where among his fellow-students was the late Chief Justice Field of Massachusetts as well as others who later became eminent in New England. After leaving school he began the practical side of his education for a business career by working in the local mills until he reached the age of eighteen years, when he went to Boston, where he has since resided. He is a business man and has always taken an active interest in national as well as local politics, being a staunch Republican, but has declined to accept public office. He has been closely associated with the growth of the Congregational Church in New England and was one of the early members of the Congregational Club of Boston. He has for many years been a member of the Massachusetts Temperance Society, which was established in 1813, and is the oldest Temperance Society in the country. For over twenty years he held the office of Councillor and for more than five years has been its President, which office he continues to hold. He is also a member of the Boston Art Club.

Mr. Whitcomb was married (1) February 12, 1856, to Mrs. Mary (Hyde) Leland, who was born July 3, 1835, and died March 29, 1861; (2) August 21, 1862, to Mrs. Mary Abigail (Lawrence) Hazeltine, who was born June 20, 1840. She was a daughter of the late Rev.

He entered Amherst College in September of that year, and was graduated in 1883 from that institution, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, with honor. Three years later the same college conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts. In October, 1883, Mr. Whitcomb entered upon the profession of teaching, accepting the position of principal of the Sandwich, Mass., Grammar School, from which, at the close of the school year in 1884, he was called to the principalship of the High School of that town. After five years of teaching in Sandwich, he resigned in 1888 to become principal of the Wakefield, Mass., High School, where he remained seven years. In April, 1895, he was elected Head Master of the new English High School in Somerville, Mass., which he organized and opened in September of that year, and of which he still remains the head (1904). He was married to Charlotte Chaponile Waterman, daughter of Charles H. and Ellen (Gray) Waterman, at Sandwich, Mass., July 10, 1889.

As a citizen Mr. Whitcomb has actively identified himself with the interests of the communities in which he has lived. He is connected with many social and professional organizations, and is particularly interested in Free Masonry. In church affiliation he is a Congregationalist, being a member of the Amherst College Church. He has always been greatly interested in the family name and history and is proud of the high character of his ancestors. Since the death of his father, John Gray<sup>(8)</sup>, in 1901, he has been in possession of the old Whitcomb homestead in Yarmouth, Me.

as such it was accomplishing much good among the Old Catholics, when the lack of funds and the bitter attacks of the secular and religious press made it appear useless to carry it on permanently in the Episcopal Church, and the workers one by one left to follow their vocations under other church government, and Mr. Whitcomb was released from all obligations and returned to Boston, where he went into business again at about the age of thirty. About one year later he removed to New York and became interested in business in that city as well as in Baltimore, Md. He has kept up his studies, and by travel and observation, broadened his knowledge of the world and its peoples, and has devoted part of his leisure hours to developing his literary talents and has contributed both prose and verse to the magazines and papers. He is unmarried.

the Hill House High School of that city. Thereafter he spent two years and a half in the Collegiate Department of Adelphi College, Brooklyn, but did not take his degree therefrom, studying for the medical profession. From Adelphi College he went to the Law School of Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn., at which university he took his degree of Bachelor of Laws, graduating fourth in his class and being one of the valedictorians. After graduating at Cumberland, he went to Portland, Oregon, and spent two years in the practice of law, returning thence to New York, where he is an attorney of the firm of Whitcomb & Whitcomb, Broadway, New York City.

Mr. Whitcomb has traveled a great deal, having been through every state in the Union except two, Maine and Arizona. His course was turned from medicine because of his father's being a lawyer and needing him in his office. While in the West he was interested in a great deal of mining, both quartz and placer mining, and at one time thought seriously of leaving the law and taking a position as Assistant Superintendent of the famous North Coal Mine in Eastern Oregon. He also while in the West acted as agent for a number of cattlemen, inspecting their ranches for them as to the condition and the product. He was married April, 1902, to Helen Pitts Renwick of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Jonathan Line.

ONATHAN WHITCOMB,<sup>2</sup> (John,<sup>1</sup>) may have been the fourth son of John,<sup>1</sup> if James is counted among the children, though this is conjecture only, as no dates or order of births are known at this writing, (Jan., 1904). With his brother, Robert Whitcomb, his brother-in-law, Rodolphus Ellmes, John Hoar and others, he served on the jury of inquest upon the death of Richard Mann of Scituate, Mass., February 16, 1655, and must have been at least 21 years of age if the common law of England fixing the legal age held in the Colonies then. He removed from Scituate to Lancaster, Mass., with his father in 1654, and seems to have exercised the rights of a freeman thereafter. He, with others, signed a petition to governor and council for aid after the Indian raid of 1675-6, and, excepting a temporary absence from the town because of its devastation by the savages, he spent the remainder of his life in Lancaster.

From the death of his father in 1662 he shared the home lot with his brother John until the death of the latter in 1683, when it became wholly his. That he acquired real estate besides that in Lancaster is shown by the inventory.

He was married November 25, 1667, to Hannah _____ and their home was situated in the middle of the town. He died in February, 1690, and the inventory of his estate was taken February 25, 1691, by his brother-in-law, John Moor, Samuel Sumner and Cyprian Stevens, and was returned under oath by his widow, April 7, 1691.

The amount of the inventory was £88 5s and as the items are of interest they are herewith given :

House Barn, and 20 acres of land.....	£32-00-00
Brush land, 15 acres.....	£ 2-00-00
Bare Hill meadow, 1½ acres.....	£ 1-10-00
Hassocky meadow, 2 acres.....	£ 2-10-00
Plum-tree meadow lot.....	£ 0-05-00
Pine-hill, ½ acre.....	£ 0-05-00
Hog Swamp, 1¼ acres.....	£ 1-05-00
Intervale at Cambridge, 14 acres.....	£ 3-00-00
Outlands at Cambridge, 67 acres.....	£ 5-14-00
Personal estate, horse, sheep, cows, etc.....	£39-16-00

About two and one-half years after the death of Jonathan, or on July 18, 1692, Hannah, Jonathan's widow, was killed at the house of Peter Joslin in Lancaster by Indians. The tragedy has been considered by several writers in their annals and histories of the times. (See Nourse's Early Records of Lancaster; Whitney's History of Worcester County; N. E. Hist. & Gen. Reg. Vol. IV; etc.)

After Hannah's death the estate was divided among the heirs by Joseph White and James and John Houghton. They allowed to Mary, the youngest daughter, £14 6s.; then to Jonathan, the oldest son, £36 on condition that he pay to the younger daughters, Mary, Katherine and Ruth, 29 s. 4 d. each; then Hannah, Abigail and Elizabeth to be paid £8 12 s. by the administrators, Josiah Whitcomb and Jonathan. Some of the children were born away from Lancaster during a period when the town had been temporarily abandoned after the Indian raid.

(Samuel Smith of Littleton recorded that he was married (1) to Mary Joslin and (2) to Mary Blood, daughter of Joseph Blood of Groton, Mass.) He was married (2) to Deborah Scripture of Groton, September 4, 1710, at Concord, Mass. He died April 10, 1715, and she probably died shortly before him, as, about that time, he paid Samuel Barrows for a coffin. The children were named in settling the estate, but the correct order of birth is uncertain.

her family name may have been Wilder. She seems to have married January 2, 1722, or 1723, Samuel Chamberlain of Chelmsford, as he finally settled up the estate, which the widow Rebecca started to administer; and he especially mentions that the youngest child was one year and two months old when the father died. The next two, aged three to four, and six to seven years, would correspond with the children of John Whitcomb, born 1684"—George A. Gardner.

THE JONATHAN LINE.

81 JOHN WHITCOMB,<sup>4</sup> (Jonathan,<sup>3</sup> Jonathan,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) was married (1) to Mary Carter, June 12, 1835, Rev. John Prentice officiating. She died February 3, 1744, aet twenty-six years. He was married (2) in 1744 or 1745 to Becke Whitcomb (67 Josiah Line), born January 16, 1728, daughter of Jonathan,<sup>4</sup> (David,<sup>3</sup> Josiah,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>). She died February 3, 1804, aet seventy-six years.

He served in the French and Indian wars and was no less renowned or active in the Revolutionary War than his brother, Colonel Asa, he having held the rank of Brigadier General, and being recommended by Washington for the position of Major General to relieve General Ward, who was out of health: proposed promotion leading in Congress to argument, the higher rank was declined.

General John Whitcomb died in Bolton, Mass., formerly a part of Lancaster, November 17, 1785, aged seventy-three years. The historian of Lancaster, Henry S. Nourse, in a memoir of General Whitcomb, says: "None seem to be more forgotten, even in the towns in which they were once the ruling spirits than the officers who led the Massachusetts Yeomanry during those tedious campaigns of the French and Indian War, which awoke the British Colonies to consciousness of their strength, and thereby hastened the founding of the Republic."

The modest stone in the oldest cemetery in Bolton reads: "John Whetcomb, Esq., died November 17, 1785, in the seventy-third year of his age." Not only does his epitaph ignore the military rank of this soldier of three wars, but it closes with "Blessed are the peace-makers: for they shall be called the children of God." In the sense of the words of one of the greatest of our modern generals who said that he was "determined to have peace if he had to fight for it," the epitaph quoted may have a meaning beyond the intention of those who inscribed it upon the tombstone of this worthy soldier of the older wars. It is a singular fact that—as the case after the war with both General John and Colonel Asa, worthy soldiers of the Revolutionary time though they were—the title of "Esquire" outranked former military titles in civil New England life.

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

Of the boy John not very much can be learned. Before his seventh birthday he had lost his father by death, and his mother survived her husband but a few years. He was placed in the guardianship of his uncle, Joseph Sawyer, the village blacksmith, and no doubt grew up in the little rural community that had gathered about the old garrison-house which his father's uncle, Josiah, had built, and of which Josiah's son was yet commandant. From items in the financial account of his stewardship rendered by the guardian, we may infer that John had ailments, and swallowed the usual drastic doses, and that these were mostly administered to him by a relative, Doctress Mary Whetcomb—the first medical practitioner resident in Lancaster—who, as Mary (Hayward) Fairbank, had been widowed in the massacre of 1697, and carried to Canada; and who claimed to have brought from her two years of captivity among the Indians a rare acquaintance with Nature's remedies. He went to school from eight to twelve weeks in the year, and the town's schoolmaster, Edward Broughton, taught him to read, write and cipher passably well; but if spelling was one of the educational exercises of his school, John never much profited thereby. Every Sabbath he accompanied his elders to the meeting-house, five miles distant, to hear the impressive exhortations of the Reverend John Prentice, and doubtless was well drilled in the catechism. Living upon the verge of an English settlement in an age when extreme frugality was compulsory upon all, and life to the majority an anxious scramble for covering and food, he certainly did not long eat the bread of idleness.

Now and then bands of marauding Indians made their presence felt not far away, and as soon as John was strong enough to handle his musket well he in his turn was detailed to serve as a ranger in the scouting-parties that were kept constantly scouring the woods at the north and west, in search of the skulking foe. He was not old enough to be accepted as a volunteer by the noted captains, Lovewell and White, in their scalping excursions, but he no doubt listened with envious admiration to the thrilling stories of their prowess, told by his neighbors, the local heroes of Indian warfare, when they brought home their bloody spoils of ambush and slaughter. The life with its peculiar restraints and privations, yet large liberty, could but favor expansion of character, and promote hardihood and self-reliance.

Upon attaining manhood, John Whetcomb received a moiety of his father's estate, coming into possession of the homestead in Bolton, then described as one hundred and thirty acres of land, with buildings. Limestone had been discovered upon or near this land, and the manufacture of lime became, in after time, the source of a generous income to him: the product of his kiln exceeding that from any other quarry in Eastern Massachusetts.

In the absence of all muster-rolls of the two companies that enlisted from Lancaster and vicinity in 1745, to serve with Col. Samuel Willard at the siege of Louisburg, it cannot be told whether John Whetcomb volunteered in that popular and brilliantly successful expedition. If in the service, it was not as an officer; but three years later his name appears with the title lieutenant, in the pay-roll of the Lancaster troops sent in pursuit of a party of savages fleeing for Canada with the trophies of a murderous raid. He had now become the foremost citizen of Bolton. As regularly as the town-meeting came he was chosen one of the selectmen, and usually held one or two other town offices. When, in May, 1748, he was first elected a member of the General Court, he could not be persuaded to accept the honor, and Bolton was unrepresented; but thereafter, until called to a higher civil office in 1773, he was nearly always the town's representative, when any was chosen, holding that office for at least twenty years. In 1754, he was appointed justice of the peace. He had gained recognition in all the country around as an able man of affairs, whose word was an ample bond.

Whatever his previous military experience may have been, he had won fair repute by it, for, upon the breaking out of the French and Indian War, he was commissioned lieutenant-colonel in the regiment raised by Colonel Samuel Willard, Jr., for the first Crown Point expedition. He was with his command in the desperate battle of September 8, 1755, at Lake George, and at the close of the campaign led the regiment home, having been promoted to the colonelcy October 27, at the death of Willard.

In 1758, John Whetcomb went to the frontier, again as lieutenant-colonel, his brother serving under him as captain. It was his regiment, led by its colonel—Jonathan Bagley, another forgotten hero of this war—that made the victorious charge upon the French advance guard near Ticonderoga, on July 5, in which Lord Howe, the inspiring genius of the army, was slain. For so brief an engagement—it lasted but an hour—the regiment's loss was quite heavy.

The following year, Colonel Whetcomb was probably not in the service, but in 1760 he commanded one of the five Massachusetts regiments in General Amherst's army assigned to the right wing, which, under Colonel William Haviland, moved out from Crown Point August 10, in batteaux, for the invasion of Canada. His orderly book for this, the closing campaign of the long war, is preserved in the Lancaster Library. It contains rosters of the eighteen companies of his command—which numbered about eight hundred men—and the general orders received between August 11 and November 9.

On February 15, 1775, Colonel John Whetcomb's name was added to the list of generals, the members of the Congress from Bolton being desired "to wait upon Hon. John Whetcomb, Esq., with a copy of his being elected a general officer, and desire his answer whether he will accept that trust, as soon as may be." He had already been chosen their colonel by the line officers of the Lancaster regiment of minute-men. He accepted the duties of both offices. Of the five

THE JONATHAN LINE.

Massachusetts generals thus appointed, Seth Pomeroy was the oldest by seven years, but Whetcomb had earliest won the rank of colonel in service, and could claim the most varied experience in military affairs; while the three younger officers much surpassed both, in the advantages which a liberal education gives.

The morning of the nineteenth of April, 1775, found General Whetcomb at his home, which was, by several miles, nearer Concord than were those of his company commanders. When, therefore, the courier dashed up to his door announcing the long expected raid of the British soldiers from Boston, after despatching the necessary orders to his field-officers, he no doubt galloped towards the scene of conflict with such escort as hastily assembled,—for he came upon the bloody field and took part in the fighting that day, as attested by General Heath in his memoirs. General Ward did not reach Cambridge until the next afternoon, when a council of war was held at which Whetcomb was one of the three generals present. May 6 the Provincial Congress passed a resolve appointing General Whetcomb and Colonel Benjamin Lincoln muster-masters of the State's army. In declining the position, the General excused himself by pleading the engrossing demands upon his time of "various avocations," and his brother was then chosen to be Colonel Lincoln's associate.

The third Provincial Congress, on June 13, elected John Whetcomb "first major-general of the Massachusetts army," Artemas Ward having been made commander-in-chief, and John Thomas lieutenant-general, the previous month. The next day Joseph Warren was chosen "second major-general," and committees were appointed to wait upon the two officers-elect and report their response. Whetcomb, either from modesty, or feeling the weight of years and increasing cares, hesitated formally to accept the commission, whereupon, the Congress, on June 16, "ordered, that Colonel Richmond, Doctor Taylor and Mr. Partridge be a committee to draw a complaisant letter to General Whetcomb, to desire a more explicit answer respecting his acceptance of the first major-general." The letter and reply were as follows:

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

Watertown, June 16, 1775.

Sir:—Your letter wherein you express yourself willing to continue in the service of this Colony, until the army is regulated and properly encamped, and then rely on a discharge, was read with much concern by this Congress, who earnestly hope you will continue in office until the conclusion of the campaign, and must beg your further and more explicit answer.

Whereas you Desire of me to Give a more Explicit Answer as to my Opintment, as the Surcumstances of the army is so Deficult and the Enemy so ner, I excep the Service to Do my Duty, as far as I shall Be Able.

John Whetcomb Colo.

Cambridge, June ye 22d, 1775.

John Whetcomb was in active service at Cambridge before and during the battle of Bunker's Hill. Having received official notice that he had been made first major-general,—and Lieutenant-General Thomas being in command of the right wing, and General Putnam of the left,—he was, of course, next in rank to the commander-in-chief at the center of the patriotic lines investing Boston. June 5, 1776, he was commissioned a brigadier-general in the Continental army, and Washington then declared his intention to assign him at once to the command of the forces of Massachusetts, relieving General Ward, who had tendered his resignation because physically disqualified for active duty. In returning the commission he asked "to be excused on account of age, and a diffidence of not being able to answer the expectation of Congress." The next month he was again elected a member of the Council, in which body he served with credit four years, and then passed from public view to the quiet of his rural home.

In the town which his whole life honored, no traditions are rife that tell of his form or personal traits. He was a republicanized Puritan, a zealous, unselfish patriot, a man of action, ignorant of rhetoric, not given to bluster. Uneducated and not disposed to overrate his own powers, he rose to command by native force of character. He must have been brave in battle, and gifted with personal magnetism and tact, for volunteer soldiers followed him with love and respect through campaign after campaign; exemplary in life, for he was looked up to in the church, and his enemy spoke nothing ill of him—impartial in judgment, for in his day and limited sphere his name stands oftenest in the record as moderator, arbitrator and magistrate—energetic in administration, for those high in authority sought his aid—judicious in legislation and council, for electors did not tire of honoring him with their unsought suffrages. (Gleaned from "A Forgotten Patriot," by Henry S. Nourse.)

All his children were born in Lancaster, Mass., and all were living January 2, 1785, the date of the drawing of his will.

Colonel Asa Whitcomb was born in Lancaster, Mass., 1719, and after the Colonial wars he represented that town in the Massachusetts General Court eight successive terms, from June 1766 to 1774. While in the General Court he constantly voted with Adams, Otis and others of the Whig patriots in the disputes and contests with the colonial governor, Hutchinson, as to the restrictions on liberty of the people of the Colonies. Colonel Whitcomb was a member of the County Convention held at Worcester in August, 1774, to consult on measures for defence and safety of the colonies in that trying period. At the commencement of the war of the Revolution he was one of the wealthiest men of Sterling, a town formed from part of Lancaster. In May, 1775, he had recruited a regiment composed largely of his old comrades in previous wars. Of this regiment he was appointed colonel and he marched with his men to take part in the battle of Bunker Hill. In this battle several men of his regiment were killed or wounded. His age at this time was fifty-six years, and on account of this age he was nearly pushed aside later.*

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

On January 1, 1776, Colonel Asa Whitcomb was in command of the Sixth Regiment of Foot in the American forces. His regiment formed part of an expeditionary march to Ticonderoga and Crown Point. At one period of his service he acted with Colonel Benjamin Lincoln as muster-master of the Massachusetts troops.

*The following order is so curious in itself, and so honorable to the person concerned, that it deserves to be perpetuated. Colonel Whitcomb had served in the former war, in which he had borne a part in several engagements, and was a gentleman highly respected. He commanded one of the Massachusetts regiments, but, on account of his advanced age, he was omitted in arranging the new army. The soldiers of his regiment were so much dissatisfied, that they resolved not to enlist under any other officer. He exhorted them not to be influenced by such a motive, in a cause so important; and, to induce them to remain, he proposed to join them in the ranks.

"November 16th. Motives of economy rendering it indispensably necessary, that many of the regiments should be reduced, and the whole put upon a different establishment, several deserving officers, not from any demerit, but pure necessity, have been excluded in the new arrangement of the army. Among these was Colonel Whitcomb; but the noble sentiments disclosed by that gentleman upon this occasion, the zeal he has shown in exhorting the men not to abandon the interest of their country at this important crisis, and his determination to continue in the service, even as a private soldier, rather than by a bad example, when the enemy are gathering strength, to put the public affairs to hazard; when an example of this kind is set, it not only entitles a gentleman to particular thanks, but to particular rewards. Colonel Jonathan Brewer is entitled to no small share of credit, in readily giving up to Colonel Whitcomb the regiment, which he was appointed to command. Colonel Whitcomb, therefore, is henceforward to be considered as Colonel of that regiment,

THE JONATHAN LINE.

Colonel Whitcomb's zeal in the righteousness and belief in the final triumph of the Revolutionary War, and his confidence in the patriotism and integrity of his countrymen and in the Congress was so implicit that he pledged his whole fortune in furnishing means for carrying on the war. At the close of the war he became bankrupt, though it is said of him that he never regretted his service or losses in the struggle. He died* in the town of Princeton, Mass., March 16, 1804, at the age of eighty-four years and was carried to Sterling, Mass., for burial.

Several British armed ships had kept possession of Nantasket Road, from the time Boston was evacuated. On the 13th of June, in the evening, General Ward ordered five hundred men, and a detachment of the train of artillery with a thirteen inch mortar, two eighteen-pounders, and some small cannon, under the command of Colonel Whitcomb, to take post on Long Island, and annoy the British ships. The necessary works were thrown up in the night, and the next morning the cannon and the mortar opened fire, and soon drove the vessels out of the harbour. The fleet consisted of thirteen in number, the Renown, of fifty guns, several smaller ships of war, and transports with Highland troops on board. They blew up the light-house as they went off, and put to sea. (Ibid. p. 432.)

When they first went to Norridgewock, Me., it was far in the wilderness, and consequently no physician within a long distance. She played the role of doctress for the country round about, and many are the stories, now extant, of her plunging her horse into the Kennebec river in the night time, and swimming the river on horseback to visit patients in critical cases. They moved first from Massachusetts to Deerfield, N. H., where he enlisted as a Revolutionary soldier and was taken prisoner by the Indians at "The Cedars." He served at Ticonderoga afterwards and was discharged December, 1776. When he was released he went to Norridgewock, Me. Was a taxpayer in that town from 1780 to 1788. He died June 21, 1824. His wife died June 1, 1823.

93 THOMAS WHITCOMB,<sup>5</sup> (Asa,<sup>4</sup> John,<sup>3</sup> Jonathan,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) was a physician and surgeon and resided in Lexington. The town records show that he was first taxed there in 1805; in 1807 he was taxed for poll and two horses. In 1810 he was married to Mrs. Hannah Chandler Bridge, widow of General Joseph Chandler and daughter of Major John and Hannah Reed Bridge. She had at least one child, Joseph, by her first marriage, who died while preparing for college. Dr. Whitcomb was Justice of the Peace in 1815. On a slate stone tablet in the old burying ground in Lexington is recorded:

"In memory of Dr. Thomas Whitcomb,
Who died March 3, 1829, aged fifty-five."

His wife survived him until 1842 when she died, aged seventy-one years.

"I remember him well at that time (1812-15); he was my father's family physician in 1812 when my youngest brother, Amos Otis, died. He was tall and slender, had large, dark and piercing eyes; looked like one who felt he was born to command. Ambition was written on his every feature and movement. He was orderly sergeant in the Lexington Artillery company. He had a very handsome uniform and a sword equal to that of any commissioned officer. In February, 1815, when the news of peace between England and our country reached Lexington, although the snow was deep, her two field cart he went into the shop and then into partnership with his employer and in 1846 bought out his partner. In 1863 he sold out the business, having accumulated a handsome fortune as fortunes went in New England country towns. In 1854 he removed to Worcester and went into the hardware business. The outbreak of the Civil War gave him the opportunity to show in a larger way his generalship in business. In 1866 he went out of the hardware business and in partnership with his son, George Henry, who had launched the great enterprise known as the Whitcomb Envelope Company. In 1839 David and his wife united with the Congregational church in Templeton and from that time on he made giving "not only a business of principle but a principle of business." The whole amount of his known charitable gifts exceeded $350,000. To him primarily Worcester owes the Worcester Free Institute. After a trip to Europe, which probably prolonged his life for some years, he died July 8, 1887. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, in a tribute to his memory said of him: "He was one of the best types of the New England character, faithful and true and strong and wise." He was married April 9, 1833, to Margaret, daughter of Asahel and Polly (Ames) Cummings. She was born November 1, 1808, in Hancock and died August 1, 1880, in Templeton, Mass.

her child was about a month old. He was married (2) December 26, 1813, to Lydia, daughter of Deacon John and Mary (Dix) Hartwell of Littleton. She died July 1, 1828. He died February 22, 1863. Hayward's History of Hancock reproduces a picture of him. It is said that he and his brother Henry were noted for unity of feeling. In business matters they shared all things in common, never keeping any accounts with each other, and so perfect was the mutual trust, that during their twenty-one years of business association no word of disagreement or dissatisfaction was ever known to have been spoken by either. They lived in a double house, known as "the Whitcomb house."

"John Whitcomb in his devotion to the best interests of the town, and for strict justice and integrity has seldom been equalled. He never swerved from duty and the right. To fail in rendering a penny was as much a violation of honesty to him, and to be rectified as certainly as if it had been a pound." He sometimes rode horseback to Boston to purchase goods.

**There used to be an old man who lived in Stow when I was a youngster whom we used to call "Crazy Ben." He was considerably off, or else rather eccentric. He was a great rider on horseback and would, when decked out in his regimentals, have sometimes two swords strapped to his waist, corn tassels in his hat, ribbons streaming, epaulets, etc., too numerous to mention. He was a fine rider and would go over fields, woods, etc., scaring the timid and enjoying himself much. (G. A. G.)

married in New York City, May 12, 1857, to Frances Caroline, daughter of John George Hamlin. He died in New York, November 19, 1883.

CHILD:

1373. JOHN HENRY,<sup>8</sup> born March 24, 1858; died May 2, 1861.

He enlisted in Company E of the Forty-fifth Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, and was sent with his regiment to North Carolina. His brother, John Davis Whitcomb, Boston, long the superintendent of the composing room at the Transcript office, enlisted and served with him. The regiment saw some hard fighting, and during Mr. Whitcomb's term of service was in the battles of Kinston, Whitehall and Goldsboro, besides numerous skirmishes.

Returning, Mr. Whitcomb assumed his old position, where he remained until 1864, when he began business for himself in Harvard place, in a little room hardly as big as his present office. Since then he has been constantly enlarging; went to Water street, then to Milk street, and to his present location sixteen years ago.

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

Mr. Whitcomb is a member of many organizations, among the more important of which are the Chickatawbut club, of which his brother and business partner, the late William Fred Whitcomb, was founder and first president; of Joseph Warren lodge of Masons, Tremont lodge, I. O. O. F., of Post 68, G. A. R., the Mechanics' Charitable association, and the Master Printers' association. Both he and his wife are active and interested in the affairs of the Home for Aged Couples in Roxbury, Mass, Mrs. Whitcomb being on the official board.

He was married November 10, 1864 to Mrs. Caroline Elizabeth (Mann) Wiswell, daughter of Jason Mann of Holden, Mass. They have resided in Dorchester since 1872.

CHILD:

1374. CARRIE LOUISE,<sup>8</sup> born December 12, 1865; died March 27, 1883.

After serving nine months in the war, he returned to the Transcript, and in 1864 was given his present position. Mr. Whitcomb is a man of considerable literary taste, and his bookishness is shown by the many volumes scattered around him. He is very particular in his selection of compositors, and for nearly three years there has been scarcely a single change in a force of over sixty. With the exception of his war service he has been in the employ of the Transcript continuously for forty-six years.

Mr. Whitcomb who has a bent toward invention has thought out the indestructible type case labels, the sale of which has reached many millions. The device is a brass plate with grooves, into which a label can be run, protected by a sheet of mica. Labels can then be changed at will, and for them inky fingers have no terrors.

In August, 1894, he entered business life at Worcester as an employe of the Whitcomb Envelope Co.; and soon afterward was appointed assistant treasurer and secretary of the corporation. In this office he served until 1898, when he became manager of the Whitcomb Envelope Company Division, United States Envelope Company, the business having been absorbed by a consolidation. In March, 1903, he acquired a half interest in United States Patent No. 721, 701, covering an envelope folding device sharing the invention with George H. Haslop. He was vice-chairman and treasurer of the Republican city committee of Worcester in 1888-1890; president of the Worcester High School Alumni Associations, secretary Amherst Alumni Association of Central Massachusetts, a member of the Psi Upsilon fraternity and Psi Upsilon Club of New York, Tassassit Canoe, Commonwealth, and Tatnuck Country Clubs of Worcester, and the University Club of Boston.

On June 20, 1895, at Newton Center, Mass., he was married to Gertrude E., daughter of the Rev. George Thomas Dowling, of Los Angeles, Cal.

The Job Line.

JOB WHITCOMB,<sup>2</sup> (John,<sup>1</sup>) may have been born in Dorchester, Mass., or perhaps was the youngest born in England of Immigrant John's sons. This deduction is made from the fact that Josiah, who was born in Dorchester in 1638, is said to have been the youngest son, and Mr. Nourse, in his early records of Lancaster, classes the two brothers, Job and Josiah, together as "the youngest sons."

Job was doubtless a surveyor, as Marvin's history of Lancaster (p. 17) records: "In surveying the boundaries of Lancaster, Job Whitcomb to carry the chain. It is stated also elsewhere that Job Whitcomb was instructed by the town of Lancaster in 1659 "to assist with Goodman Prescott, young Job Farrar to carry the chain," etc.

Job was married May 19, 1669, to Mary ———. Several authorities say this Mary was a daughter of Rev. Joseph Rowlandson, but as Mary Rowlandson was but three years old at the time of Job's marriage and as she died at the age of thirteen years, she could not have been the Mary.

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

The town of Lancaster during the winter of 1675-6 was a scene of alarm, violence and death because of the depredations of the savages, and on February 10. of this season, the house of the pastor, Rev. Joseph Rowlandson, was attacked, whereupon he left the town and later settled in Wethersfield, Conn. Lancaster being considered untenable, troops were sent up with carts and the people and all their movable property were conveyed to the Eastern towns, where they found homes with their friends. The Indians immediately descended upon the luckless town and "burned every house except the house of God and one other." (See Marvin's Lancaster, pp. 111-112.)

Job Whitcomb's name was signed with those of his brothers, John and Jonathan, to a petition to governor and council for aid after this raid; but he did not return to Lancaster at the re-settlement of the town but followed the Rev. Joseph Rowlandson to Wethersfield, (See Nourse's Early Records, p. 266), and settled there, probably subsequent to 1678, as the birth of his daughter, Jemima, is recorded in Cambridge in that year. According to Probate Court files he owned land in Wethersfield in 1680 on a proposed six-rod highway to Rocky Hill, then a part of Wethersfield.

He died in 1683. His will, drawn October 27, 1683, mentions four children, and his brothers, Jonathan and Josiah, are named in the will as trustees.

CHILDREN:

3. MARY,<sup>3</sup> born December 10, 1671, Lancaster, Mass.
  - +4. JOB,<sup>3</sup> born ———, 1674, Lancaster, Mass.
  5. JEMIMA,<sup>3</sup> born January 30, 1678, Cambridge, Mass.; was married April 15, 1697, to Ebenezer Loomis of Windsor, Mass. She died December 10, 1712; four children.
  6. JOHN,<sup>3</sup> born ———, 1680, Wethersfield, Connecticut.
- 4 JOB WHITCOMB,<sup>3</sup> (Job,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) was born in 1674, probably in Lancaster, as was his sister Mary, for there is no reason for supposing his father to have removed from this town until after the Indian raid of 1675-6. It is obvious that the elder Job may have found an asylum in Cambridge, Mass., for a time on fleeing from Lancaster, for the birth of one child, Jemima, is recorded there. Job<sup>3</sup> was married to Ann Loomis and may have lived in Wethersfield, Conn., or he may have removed to Colchester, Conn., where his descendants settled, but up to this date (January, 1904) I have learned nothing further concerning him, except that he had sons as follows:

CHILDREN:

7. JOB,<sup>4</sup> born ———.
- +8. JOHN,<sup>4</sup> born ———.
9. SOLOMON,<sup>4</sup> born ———.
10. HIRAM,<sup>4</sup> born ———.

8 JOHN WHITCOMB,<sup>4</sup> (Job<sup>3</sup> Job,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) settled in Connecticut and was a farmer in the town or vicinity of Colchester. He was married February 15, 1715 or 16, to Mehitable Dunham, daughter of John Dunham of Colchester. The children are all recorded in the town records of Colchester, Conn.

CHILDREN:

14 JOB WHITCOMB,<sup>5</sup> (John,<sup>4</sup> Job,<sup>3</sup> Job,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) went from Connecticut in 1787 and settled in Laceyville, Pa. The following entry is found in the records of the First Church of Colchester, Conn.: "Job Whitcomb married Anna Skinner, March 10, 1757." She was born May 14, 1739. Job and three of his sons were veterans of the Revolutionary War; the legend on Job's tombstone in the family cemetery in Laceyville is: "He and his three sons fought for our liberties." According to the War Department records of men in the war of the Revolution, Job Whitcomb was enlisted May 28, 1777, in Capt. Judd's Company, Farmington; he served in the First and Eighth Connecticut weeks after the evacuation by the British and then went through the campaign at Long Island, New York, White Plains and New Jersey. He went to Cornwall, Conn., in youth or early manhood, and spent his succeeding life in that town. He may have come from Sharon, Conn., for his first deed of land was made in 1790 to Hiram Whitcomb of Sharon, Conn. He owned his own place in Cornwall; it was below the cemetery or one and one-half miles below Cornwall Bridge. He was a farmer and also ran a still. All his children were born in Cornwall and settled in that vicinity. He was married to Sarah Dutton. Hiram and Sarah joined the Congregational church in Cornwall May 26, 1799. Both Hiram and his wife died and were buried in Cornwall. He died February 28, 1836; she died August 25, 1840.

20 JOHN SKINNER WHITCOMB,<sup>6</sup> (Job,<sup>5</sup> John,<sup>4</sup> Job,<sup>3</sup> Job,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) was married in 1789, to Sally Marsh. They were the first couple ever married in Geneva, N. Y. She was born February 6, 1774, and died September 20, 1854; he died November 8, 1838. They are buried in the family cemetery at Laceyville, Pa. He entered the American army during the Revolutionary War at the age of 13, as a wagoner, from Farmington, Conn., and served first as a private in a regiment commanded by Col. Hay of the Pennsylvania Line, and was in the service five years. He moved to Geneva, N. Y., where most of his children were born. Later in 1811, he went to Pennsylvania, where he built the first frame house in what was then called Hemlock Bottoms. He cut logs on his own place, rafted them to the nearest sawmill, which was sixty miles away at Wilkes Barre; had them cut up, then poled them back up the river in a boat. He ground his paint for the house, using an old kettle and a cannon ball for the purpose; the kettle and the cannon ball were kept as relics in the family for many years. The nearest grist mill and store were in Wilkes Barre, Pa., whither he went in a canoe and poled the canoe back up the stream; he raised his own apple orchard from seeds brought from Connecticut. They resided at Scottsville, Pa.

provisions in a knapsack on his shoulder. During the two weeks he remained, he cut and cleared nearly one-half an acre of timber on which he erected a small log house made of basswood, then returned to his family in Connecticut. The following spring, April, 1792, himself and family, consisting of his wife, child and a half brother, Henry Goslee, left their native town in Connecticut for their new home in Lexington, Green County, N. Y. They were conveyed across the country in a two-wheeled cart, drawn by two yoke of oxen, with all their effects in the cart. Their live stock consisted of one cow which was led behind. The last six miles of their journey was through a dense forest with no road except what was cut as they passed along and they were three days making this distance, soft maple and basswood brush serving as fodder for their cattle. After resting a day or two, Israel started back to Connecticut to return the oxen which were hired. The creek near Catskill was swollen but he guided the oxen into the water and they swam across with him in the cart. He reached Connecticut in due time and returned to his new home in safety. A few years later Whitcomb and Goslee divided the farm; the Whitcomb part remaining in the family till March, 1892. During the one hundred years the Whitcomb family remained on this place, no mortgage was placed upon it. Israel Whitcomb's brother-in-law, Elijah Moore, bought a farm one mile south of the Whitcomb farm. The house he built there, in 1797, remains standing to this time, (1903).

One day Whitcomb was hauling logs to the mill, when one very large one slipped, fell across his hip and fastened him down in such a way that he could not remove himself; here he lay helpless and too far from any house or person to make himself heard, but shortly a dog came near whom he recognized as "old Ring," a dog which had made his home sometimes with the Moore family and sometimes with the Whitcombs. The dog came near the prisoned man and Whitcomb patted him, saying "Poor Ring." Soon the dog was gone, having taken a straight line to Moore's house where he scratched on the door and was admitted and at once began to make pitiful demonstrations; Mrs. Moore observing this, called Mr. Moore from an adjoining room, who saw at once that something was wrong by the dog taking hold of his leather apron and leading him to the door: at this Mr. Moore followed the dog to the mill, where he saw the condition of his brother-in-law. He extricated him and took him home on his sled. His hip was broken, and, never being set, he was always lame and obliged to use crutches. (S. M. Whitcomb's Ms.)

His wife died November 18, 1812. He was married (2) to Elizabeth (Sunderlin) Arnold, July 27, 1813; she was born November 13, 1769.

many shoes for the Indians in Luzerne County, Pa. The country was so stony their moccasins were not adequate. He lived at the time of his first marriage in what is now Wyoming County, Pa. The nearest grist mill was 60 miles away at Wilkes Barre. He went to mill by river in a skiff and at one time because of a freshet had to wait six weeks for his grist, then poled his skiff up the river to his home. His family had subsisted all the time on shad and parsley. He was abnormally muscular and his nerves were under such perfect control that he was able to climb to great heights and maintain his balance. At "raisings" he "walked the rafters" from eaves to ridge pole, up one side and down the other, and would then stand on the peak of the front gable and drink from a bottle. He died November 18, 1850.

The Josiah Line.

OSIAH WHITCOMB,<sup>2</sup> (John,<sup>1</sup>) was born in Dorchester, Mass., in 1638, according to Dorchester town records, and is believed to have been the youngest son of John.<sup>1</sup> He accompanied his father's family from Scituate to Lancaster, Mass., in 1654, and his name appears variously in the early records of life in the new town. In 1688 he was granted a bounty for killing a wolf,* and again he was named with his brother Job in an action for damages for accidentally or otherwise injuring or killing swine. (See page 32, this Book.)

Josiah was married January 4, 1664, in Lancaster, to Rebecca, daughter of Lawrence and Ann Linton Waters, of Watertown, Lancaster and Charlestown, Mass. She was born in February, 1640.

During Queen Ann's war (1702-17) he was allowed a garrison for protection against the Indians. This garrison was situated in what is now called Bolton, originally a part of Lancaster, but set off in 1738, and he lived in the southeastern part of this Bolton. He was commander of the garrison and with him were associated his sons, Josiah, David and Hezekiah, his son-in-law, Jacob Houghton, also Henry Houghton and John Wilder, Jr.

In 1705 he was selectman; in 1708 he and twenty-nine others signed the church covenant and, as he was financially in good circumstances, he contributed liberally towards the support of the church; in 1710 he was elected to represent Lancaster in the General Court.

In his will, drawn March 20, 1718, he gave to each of his children one-eighth part of his right to land in the plantation of Littleton. His widow, who survived him eight years, died in 1726.

Though Jonathan's recorded posterity is, numerically, the largest of the sons of John,<sup>1</sup> there is reason to believe Josiah's posterity is at least as numerous. The tabulated records of Josiah's descendants nearly equal those of Jonathan, while those records which are known to exist, but which are not yet obtained, outnumber the corresponding class in any other line.

A rough granite slab erected to Josiah's memory bears the following inscription:

Her husband, Jonathan Fairbanks, was killed by Indians at Lancaster, Mass., September 4, 1697; she was taken captive, but was returned January 17, 1699, on the Province Galley from Casco Bay. While in captivity she acquired a knowledge of herbs which resulted in her afterwards dispensing medicine and being called "Doctress." They lived in the Southeastern corner of Bolton, Mass., where they kept a tavern, as is shown by the following:

Selectmen.

The following extract from his "Bond" sets forth in plain terms David's duties and responsibilities as inn-keeper :

"He shal not suffer, or have, any playinge at cards, dice, lally, bowls, ninepins, billiards, or any other unlawful game or games in his said house, or yard, or garden, or backside, nor shal suffer to remain in his house enny person or persons, not being his own family, on Saturday night after dark or Sabbath days, or during the tyme of God's publick worrship; nor shal he entertain as lodgers in his house any strangers, men or women, above the space of forty and eight hours, but such whose names and surnames he shal deliver to some one of the selectmen or constable of the towne, unless they shal be such as he verry well knoweth and will ensure for his or her forthcoming—nor shal sell enny wine to the Indians or negroes, nor suffer any children, or servant, or other person, to remane in his house tippling or drinking after nine o'clock in the night—nor shal buy or take to preserve any stolen goodes, nor knowingly or willingly harbor in his house, barn, stable, or otherwise, any rogues, vagabonds, thieves, sturdy beggars, or offenders whatsoever—nor shal anny person or persons whatsoever sell or utter any wine, ale, cider, rum or other liquors by defaulting, or by color of his License—nor shal entertain any person or persons whom he shal be prohibited by law, or by enny one of the Magistrates of the community, as persons of jolly conversation, or given to tippling."

David Whitcomb died intestate April 11, 1730, and his wife, Mary, died January 5th, 1734, in the sixty-seventh year of her age. Real estate owned by David was divided among his family by partition proceedings. (Concerning David's children, the dates and order of birth are not positively known.)

8 HEZEKIAH WHITCOMB,<sup>3</sup> (Josiah,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) was married to Hannah ———. They lived in that part of Lancaster, Mass., which became Bolton, where he was quite prominent in the church, and where he died previous to June 20, 1732, when letters of administration were taken out by Hannah, his widow, and Hezekiah, his oldest son. The estate was inventoried at £982. The real estate was divided May 8, 1733. There is a record of a sale of land and buildings in Littleton, Mass. (then Groton), by Hezekiah Whitcomb to Jonathan Farnsworth, June 17, 1708, and the family may have lived there until that date.

*There has been much discussion as to whether David<sup>3</sup> or Josiah<sup>3</sup> was the father of Joseph<sup>4</sup> but the records of Worcester County, Mass., which county includes Lancaster and the towns carved out of it, contain a quitclaim deed, dated April 30, 1755, made by David Whitcomb,<sup>4</sup> Simon Whitcomb<sup>4</sup> and the heirs of Jonathan Whitcomb,<sup>4</sup> deceased, and also Joseph Whitcomb,<sup>4</sup> and Ezra Sawyer, both of Lancaster, and Benjamin Whitcomb<sup>4</sup> of Leominster, confirming a contract for the sale of land made in 1724 by David Whitcomb,<sup>3</sup> who is described by the heirs as "our honored father." Ezra Sawyer was the husband of David's eldest daughter. This confirms evidence already received from the Register of Probate in Middlesex Co., which formerly included Lancaster, and also evidence received from the Lancaster town clerk, as to the parentage of Joseph.<sup>4</sup> The same records contain a deed of land in Leominster from Joseph Whitcomb and Damaris, his wife, dated March 22, 1770.

See, also, letters on this subject from Chas. Zebina Lincoln in "Appendix."

*His sons, at the time of coming to Swanzey, were from eight to twenty-nine years of age. The names of the sons, and the titles by which they were afterwards known, were Lieutenant Joseph, Col. Jonathan, Col. Elisha, Gen. Philemon, and Abijah. I want to record a little anecdote that I have often heard our father and other of the old people tell of our great-grandfather and his brother Abijah. While our great-grandfather (Col. Jonathan) was at Cambridge, Mass., in 1775, he (Col. Jonathan) was entertaining some of his military friends, and spoke to his brother Abijah to bring in some rum. Abijah, being the only one of the five brothers without a commission, felt the slight keenly of Col. Jonathan not introducing him to the officers, thinking, naturally enough, that it was some honor to be a brother of a commissioned officer, so he bawled out: "Which will you have, brother Jonathan, Old England or New England?" These five brothers settled in Swanzey, where they brought up large families. Lieutenant Joseph was the only one to move away. He went to Grafton, Vt., taking his family with him. Their Swanzey home was where Mrs. Phineas Stone now lives, though none of the old buildings are now standing.—(Extract from a letter by L. J. W. Carpenter.)

32 ELEAZER WHITCOMB,<sup>4</sup> (Hezekiah,<sup>3</sup> Josiah,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) was married October 5, 1749, to Mary Putman. He lived in Bolton, Mass., and died there May 13, 1776. His will, dated April 19, 1776, mentions his wife, Mary, and a daughter, Mary. He gives a silver cup to his cousin, William Whitcomb (122) and a gun to Rufus (306), a son of William.* His estate was appraised at £401 7 s 8 d.

CHILD:

- 132. MARY,<sup>5</sup> born ———.

37 PAUL WHITCOMB,<sup>5</sup> (Josiah,<sup>4</sup> Josiah,<sup>3</sup> Josiah,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) lived and died in Bolton, Mass., where he was known as "Captain." He was married September 19, 1759, to Rebecca Whitney of Harvard, Mass. He died March 15, 1802.

CHILDREN:

- 133. ELIZABETH,<sup>6</sup> born August 14, 1760.
- +134. SILAS,<sup>6</sup> born October 23, 1761.

*This word "cousin" seems to indicate a family not on record at all; "nephew" would make it clear, as indicated by the bracketed numbers.

"Mr. John Whitcomb came to the town about 1763 from Bolton, Mass., with a wife and three small children. He rode one horse and brought such articles as he could; his wife rode another horse, which carried a pair of panniers (baskets suspended on each side of the horse); in each of the baskets a child was placed, the other child being carried by the mother in her arms."

His wife died in April, 1803. He survived her until March 31, 1835, when he died, aged one hundred and three years and four months, the oldest man who ever lived in Swanzey, N. H. He was a Revolutionary War pensioner. He personally applied for the pension when he was one hundred years old. New Hampshire pension files show that he enlisted in 1775 and served in 1776-7-9. He was discharged December 16, 1779, on account of sickness from exposure on picket.

He settled in Swanzey, N. H., and kept the first store and the first tavern in the town. He served in the Revolutionary War and received £18 8 s. 4 d. for eight and one-half months at Cambridge, Mass., in 1775. He was Captain of the largest company in Col. James

THE JOSIAH LINE.

Reed's regiment at Lexington, April 19, 1775, and at Bunker Hill, June 17. On June 21 his company numbered fifty-nine men, nine of them officers. He was stationed between Col. Reed's barracks and the ferry, a most important position. His company encamped upon Winter Hill, numbering about seventy men from Keene, N. H., and Swanzey. He was promoted to the rank of Colonel in this year, as October 13, 1775, he receipted for £4 for each man in his regiment for coats furnished by the colony of New Hampshire. He had a little difficulty with a Captain Marcy, who accused him of cowardice, but a clean and gallant war record was sustained by the "Court of Inquiry."

Col. and Mrs. Whitcomb used to make horseback journeys to Boston to buy goods, loading each horse with as much as could be carried in saddle bags, and their granddaughter, Mrs. Bailey, writes: "They brought to New Hampshire in their saddle-bags the first bunch of lilacs they had ever seen. They were set out on our old place, near the old house, where my father's family were all born." Jonathan died June 13, 1792. His old regiment attended the funeral, the procession being one and one-half miles long. Drums were muffled and the dead march was played in very solemn strains. His horse was saddled and bridled as it was in the army; his boots were hung beside the saddle, and thus caparisoned, the animal was led behind the pall-bearers to his master's grave, where the military escort fired a salute. Jonathan Whitcomb and his brothers were very prominent in early Swanzey history, occupying positions of importance. His widow died at the home of her son Nathan. Where the dates are double, there is discrepancy between the records in "Swanzey History" and in the "Carter Genealogy."

CHILDREN:

78      ELISHA WHITCOMB,<sup>5</sup> (Joseph,<sup>4</sup> David,<sup>3</sup> Josiah,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) had the military title of Major. He was eleven months and eight days in the army in Canada in 1776, and twelve days at Otter Creek in 1777. He received for his services £26 9 s. 2 d. He was then called Colonel. He was at the battle of Bunker Hill. He bought 300 acres of land and a mill at Westmoreland, N. H., from Benjamin Whitcomb (85), September 16, 1771, for £240, but sold the property to Josiah Richardson, a trader from Keene, October 15, 1773. He was married October 7, 1764, to Joanna Whitcomb (89) of Leominster, Mass. He was a prominent citizen of Swanzey, N. H., being State Senator for seven years. He died September 17, 1814, his widow surviving him until December 27, 1835; both were buried at Swanzey.

THE JOSIAH LINE.

The Swanzey, N. H., pay rolls show this entry "Philemon Whitcomb, four months in 1777, by Benjamin Parker. £8 13 s. 4 d." Like his brothers he was prominent in early Swanzey history. He had a sawmill and a trip hammer. He was twice married; (1) in Lancaster, Mass., to Martha Sawyer of Lunenburg, Mass.; the intention was published March 23, 1770; she was born in 1755 and died December 17, 1816; and (2) to Mrs. Anna Aldrich (widow of Amasa Aldrich), June 3, 1818. He died January 10, 1824.

85 BENJAMIN WHITCOMB,<sup>5</sup> (Benjamin,<sup>4</sup> David,<sup>3</sup> Josiah,<sup>2</sup> John,<sup>1</sup>) was the most prominent pioneer, trapper and hunter of his time in New Hampshire and Vermont. He was a successful scout and spy during the French and Indian and Revolutionary Wars. He won his Major's commission* by shooting Gen. Gordon in Canada. This commission was offered by Gen. Washington as a reward to any American soldier who would kill a British General in retaliation for the wanton butcheries and massacres of women and children in the frontier settlements by the Indians under the British. Benjamin Whitcomb, after he had ambushed and killed Gen. Gordon, was captured by the Indians and expected to forfeit his life, but was set free by an Indian whom he had befriended many years before. This account of him is gleaned from Hemanway's "Vermont," but the incident of his being set free by the Indian was the basis of a story in the Vermont School Readers of a generation ago. He was married December 14, 1769, to Lydia Howe of Westmoreland, N. H. He received the promised commission and was generally known as "Major Ben," and died in Lisbon, N. H., in 1827, over ninety years of age. He was allowed a pension for four years' actual service as Major in New Hampshire troops, according to Pension File 42614.

*"Nov. 27, 1903, at Berlin, Mass., was celebrated the anniversary of the birth of Miss Rebecca Whitcomb, which occurred in 1799, one year before the last century began. Living in three centuries, Miss Whitcomb is to-day, at the age of 104, in remarkably good health and in perfect possession of all her faculties—probably the oldest woman in Worcester County. She received many friends during the day, and among others, her pastor, the Rev. Charles E. White, with whom she sang hymns with a voice that still shows its former sweetness. Miss Whitcomb was one of eleven children born to Silas and Lucy Whitcomb, of Bolton, Mass. Hundreds of people now in their seventies and eighties remember her as a devoted Sunday school and day school teacher. For many years she lived in the family of Dr. Edward Hartshorn, but of late years has resided with her nephew, Capt. Silas Sawyer, who, though ninety-two years of age, is wondrously active and youthful."—(Boston Daily Paper.)

"April 22, 1904. 'Aunt Rebecca' Whitcomb of Berlin died to-day at the residence of Capt. Silas Sawyer, her nephew, after a few days' illness, in her 105th year. She is said to have been the oldest person in Massachusetts.

"Longevity seemed to be the inheritance of all her family, her mother living to the age of 87 and her father to the age of 70. Miss Whitcomb was an attendant of the Berlin Congregational Church, and in religious as well as secular affairs she always manifested great interest. She was a woman of patient and genial disposition, and up to the time of her death possessed her faculties, and was often heard to say that her last days were her best."—(Boston Herald.)

THE JOSIAH LINE.

farm in 1849 for $3,000 in gold, and removed with his family to McLean County, Ill., where he died. On one occasion he was a party in one of the races to the government land office which frequently created much excitement among the early settlers of Illinois. The land office was distant seventy miles, and the race was made in two-horse wagons. He won the race and secured 338 acres of valuable land at $1.25 per acre, a property afterwards worth $60 or more per acre. In 1835 he united with the Methodist Church, and till his death was true to Christianity and to the church of his choice. His honesty of purpose was his chief characteristic and no one could doubt his sincerity. In all his dealings with his fellow men he was just. He was a man of sound judgment, and was sought after as an arbitrator of disputes. He was a lover of peace, but a very brave man. He was temperate in habits and highly esteemed by all who knew him. He died January 15, 1872. His wife was daughter of William Evans, who built the first cabin within the limits of Bloomington, Ill." (Jeremiah Whitcomb.)

his brothers, William and Wilson, and Aunt Polly had black eyes, straight black hair and high cheekbones, and they were about the color of smoked ham. All of my brothers and sisters had black eyes and the older ones dark skins. I am the only blue-eyed one in the family. Our family has not been celebrated for great things, nor has it been prominent in politics or public affairs. The older boys were excellent mechanics. They invented the whirlpool waterwheel from which grew the turbine wheel of today. They had it patented and made some money out of it, but it was soon improved and the old wheel lost prestige. I put four years into service during the rebellion, Zeno also being a Union soldier." Joseph Whitcomb,<sup>7</sup> died at Argyle, N. Y., March 11, 1866.

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

1882, in Swanzey. This couple had eighteen children, and Otis lived to see thirty-three grandchildren and five great grandchildren. A son, Andrew, says: "Father once promised his wife a new silk dress, when she had her twentieth child. She never got the dress, although she tried hard for it." He was called "Captain" and took great interest in military matters always, and was found doing military duty when quite an old man. He has been made famous by Denman Thompson's play, "Joshua Whitcomb." The character of Joshua was a combination of Joshua Holbrook (an old resident of Swanzey) and Otis Whitcomb.* and Swanzey people have said that "Uncle Joshua was Otis Whitcomb to the life." Mr. Thompson, the playwright, who was a native of Swanzey, was very fond of Mr. Whitcomb and often had him on the stage during his plays. Four or more of the sons were in the Union army during the Civil War.

During the next few years he lived in Westmoreland, Medway and Concord in Massachusetts, and in Providence, R. I. The experience of ten years following are summarized thus:

"October 5, 1845—Sailed from New Bedford on whaler 'Marengo,' Theodore Cole, master; returned April 22, 1848.

"November 11, 1848—Sailed in 'Cowper of New Brunswick,' whaler, C. H. Cole, master; returned March 22, 1851.

"July 5, 1851—Sailed on bark 'Manuel Ortis,' C. H. Cole, master; returned May 1, 1854.

"On July 10, 1854, he sailed from New York on the merchant ship 'William Penn,' John Cole, master, for San Francisco, which port was reached December 22, 1854. He then followed various pursuits, principally mining on Feather River, Butte County, Cal., until August, 1856, when he shipped as boatswain on the clipper ship 'Star of the Union,' Frederick A. Stail, master, arriving in New York in November, 1856. In April, 1857, he shipped as second mate of the merchant bark 'C. H. Yarrington,' Oliver Gorham, master, for Smyrna, returning home in September. Then for ten months he was engaged in butchering business with Mr. Pitkin, who had married his mother. In October, 1858, he shipped in the bark 'Scotland,' of Boston, John Rowe, master, as second mate for a voyage to Valparaiso, Chili, and other ore points. Returning home in the winter of 1859 (November), he remained on land until the spring of 1860 when he shipped in packet service, running between Boston and Philadelphia. He returned from the last trip in October, 1860, closing a seafaring life of fifteen years, nine of them spent in whaling. The day before Thanksgiving, 1860, he began work as a green hand in a Boston machine shop, where he remained until April, 1863, when he removed to Waltham, Mass., and began work for the American Watch Company, staying there until June, 1872, when, in company with Henry N. Fisher and George F. Ballou as 'Ballou, Whitcomb & Co.,' he began the manufacture of watch machinery in Boston. The following year they moved to Waltham and in April, 1874, the firm became 'Whitcomb & Fisher,' Mr. Ballou retiring. In November, 1876, Ambrose Webster was admitted to the firm, which has three large buildings and employs ninety hands." (Ex. from the Cole Genealogy.)

Mr. Whitcomb is the inventor of the "Whitcomb Lathe," one of the most valued of jeweler's accessories, and is employed with the Waltham Watch manufactory.

He was married June 20, 1867, to Hannah Elizabeth Spear, who was born in West Newton, Mass., September 12, 1845. They reside in Waltham, Mass., where he has served as alderman and held other positions of responsibility and trust.

The following is quoted from the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press: "He came of a family noted for their distinctive traits of character, recognizing no such word as 'fail' in whatever they undertook. After receiving as good an education as possible in the district schools of his native town, he began life by working on the farm of his oldest brother at $12 per month. In 1852 he went to California and bought and drove cattle across the plains at great risk of his life. In 1860 he married Edith, daughter of John Fay, and granddaughter of Nathan Fay, one of the first settlers and most prominent residents of Richmond, Vt. In 1869 he returned to California, bought a ranch of 6,000 acres on the Sacramento River, eighteen miles from the city of Sacramento. After six years he returned to Vermont, bought the Fay farm in Williston, gradually adding to his possessions, owning wood lots, a farm in Jericho, one in Essex, another in Waterbury, another in Richmond, five hundred acres in Valcour Island, N. Y., and two thousand head of cattle in Wyoming. He was a conservative Republican and a Universalist. He died July 18, 1903.

Untraced Whitcombs.

REUBEN WHITCOMB, enlisted in 1776 as a private in Capt. Carlisle's Company, for service in the Revolutionary War; he served one year, then was drafted in July, 1777, to go to Bennington, Vt.; he procured enlisting orders and raised a company of fifty-five men, called Green Mountain Rangers, and received Captain's commission signed by Gen. Hathaway and Samuel Robinson. His company was attached to Col. Herrick's Independent regiment; the whole army, commanded by Gen. Stark, was in the Bennington Battle, and Reuben received a wound in the hip. He was in all the fighting down about Stillwater and was present at the surrender of Burgoyne.

His command took part in the bombardment of Ticonderoga, seven days, until the ammunition was exhausted, and the army had to retreat across Lake George. Capt. Whitcomb was put in command of a sloop in the next attack on the British at Ticonderoga, which attack, being unsuccessful, he run his sloop ashore and blew her up rather than let the British capture her; then marched over the mountains to Vermont and was honorably discharged after having commanded the company in actual service for six months. He again volunteered as a private in 1778 or 1779.

After the war he moved from Vermont to Northfield, Mass., then to Clarendon, Vt., thence to New York State, and thence to Ohio.

When he applied for a pension, August 8, 1832, he was seventy-five years old, and a resident of Williamson, Wayne County, N. Y. He died in Willoughby, Lake County, Ohio, November 9, 1843. His wife, Esther, survived him until March 22, 1848, when she died in Cleveland, Cuyahoga County, Ohio. In 1848 there were living four—

Concerning Capt. Otis Whitcomb; the Original of "Josh" Whitcomb of "The Old Homestead."

WHEN the play, "The Old Homestead," promised to be a great success, Denman Thompson sent for Otis Whitcomb, the original of "Uncle Josh," to be his guest. The first night the old man, seated in a box, saw his home and himself mirrored in a play, is still remembered by that audience. He sat motionless till the entrance of his old friend, whose "gee-haw" to the ox team was almost drowned in a roar of applause. Then Otis Whitcomb rose up, his face aglow with emotion, and stretching his lean body over the edge of the box he waved his hands frantically: "Den!" he called, "Den! you're all right, only, gone fire! you've got the off ox hitched on the right side!"

"Gone fire" was the first and last oath in the vocabulary of the New Hampshire farmer. It was seldom used expletively. Otis was simple, large-hearted, merry and youthful to the last day of his eighty-second year. One of the sons, now master of the old homestead, writes:

"Father was a great character. He was as spry as a cricket long after the age when old folks are reconciled to going round doubled up with rheumatism. He'd lived most all his life outdoors and worked hard enough to keep his joints well limbered up. When work was done, he was always ready for a bit of fun.

"We young folks would be filling the old kitchen with noise and frolic when in would come father. He'd pull off his boots, get into a pair of old slippers, and dance a breakdown none of us youngsters could keep up with. I reckon he and mother had their hands full managing the crowd of us, for we strung along pretty near a year and a half between. The old house had all it could do to hold us. Father never cared how much noise we made; we could raise the roof with frolics if we'd a mind to; but the law was always laid down, 'no quarreling.' Father was the last to go to bed. Every night he'd see we were all asleep first. He'd wander round the house gathering up the shoes we'd thrown off. He used to say he couldn't count us in bed, but he knew when the old bushel basket was full of shoes we were all safe under the roof.

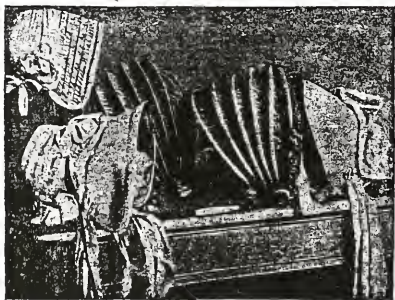

"'Captain Oat' was the name father generally went by in Swanzey. He was captain of the militia artillery, and although he didn't go to the war, some of the boys who did right brave fighting in the great battles of the early sixties got their training in father's company. There was nothing he enjoyed more than our play acting; though he never took a part in it himself.

"The greatest day in the history of Swanzey was when Den Thompson played 'The Old Homestead' at Keene. The railroad ran special trains and the whole countryside turned out to see the play. It was hard work getting the scenery into the town hall, but it was harder work finding room for the audience. How they did howl and chuckle over the folks they knew and their doings! I don't believe though, there was any such roar of laughing heard as when Josh called for a bootjack to pull of his straight boots. Every man in Swanzey, I guess, wore straight boots and used bootjacks."

"Captain Oat" lived to see grandchildren and great-grandchildren growing up about him. To them the old homestead of Swanzey was the most wonderful place on earth. At Thanksgiving time—the last Thanksgiving Otis Whitcomb saw—they came, fifty of them, big and little, to be stowed away for one glorious day and night under the old roof-tree. The kitchen stove was not big enough to bake and broil and stew for such a host, so the ancient Dutch oven by the wide chimney was dusted out and heated. Then from its glowing depths came such pies and cakes and loaves as it had not seen for many Thanksgivings. There are six bedrooms in the old house; they were filled. Then trundle beds, cots and shake-downs were scattered everywhere. It was a tight fit for the old home, but a merry one. A glorious time at the old farm was in the summer of '81, when sixty Whitcombs came a-picnicking. Hayracks carried them to the grove, where the table was set. The guest of honor was merry old "Captain Oat," who carried the last great-grandchild, a six-months-old baby. They met again next year on a chilly March day for a last look at Otis Whitcomb. His merry blue eyes were closed, but a smile still lingered on the keen old face.

From Otis Whitcomb's Attic.

In the Swanzey village entertainment room is a collection of curios. Everywhere, on their labels, one reads the Whitcomb name. There are ancient dishes, clocks, warming pans, bake ovens, spinning wheels, queer old bonnets and flapping calashes, corsets which were stitched and worn a hundred years ago, wedding slippers yellowed by age, backcombs, stately of height and ample of width, chairs an antique collector would turn robber for, and cocked hats worn in Revolutionary days. But most interesting, perhaps, of all, to lovers of Denman Thompson's fine drama, is a cradle of polished birdseye maple which for many a year did its duty by Otis Whitcomb's hearth. In the bottom is painted a family register of the eighteen children it rocked to sleep.—[From an article in Housekeeper.]

"Maj. Ben." Whitcomb's Narrative.

East St. Johnsbury, Feb. 11, 1863.

"At your request I have scribbled off the historical sketch of Maj. Whitcomb. It is substantially as he related it to me in watching with him in his last sickness, and may be relied upon as strictly true. * * *

Respectfully yours,
"DAVID GOODALL."

Major Whitcomb was the most prominent pioneer, trapper and hunter of Essex County, often spending months at a time in the wilderness, subsisting upon game, and falling in frequently with the Indians, hunting and camping with them, and always taking pains to conciliate them and secure their friendship. At one time he found an Indian in early winter alone and nearly starved, his gun-lock having broken. Whitcomb took him to camp, fed and kept him three weeks, trapped with him and divided furs, and then gave him food to last him home.

Major Whitcomb served under Putnam in the old French War; was in several fights and was taken prisoner by the Indians and carried to Quebec. He often ran, wrestled and shot at marks with the Indians, always managing to let them beat him, as it would have given offence to them had it been otherwise.

After Ticonderoga was taken by Allen, Whitcomb hastened there and served as a scout. The commander of the Fort received a circular from Gen. Washington, saying that he wished to retaliate upon the British officers for the wanton butcheries and massacres on the women and children by the Indians, and to accomplish it offered any American soldier who would go into Canada and waylay and shoot a British General, a major's commission and pay in the American army, and a captain's commission for a colonel, etc., etc.—Whitcomb and two others volunteered to go and try. One man deserted before reaching the line. Whitcomb and his companion pursued their way to near Three Rivers and ascertained that a brigade of British soldiers and some Indians were about to move towards the line and the route they would take.

Whitcomb selected a place of ambush and made all ready. The night before the British were to move, his companion, alarmed at their dangerous position, deserted and went over to the enemy and informed them of Whitcomb's plans and intentions. Whitcomb was greatly annoyed and vexed, but had no thought of losing his major's commission. He moved nearer to the British camps, hunting up a new place for his ambuscade where a small river made a turn and came near the road, a deep ravine running back from the river some distance. His position was at the root of a large tree which had been blown down, the top reaching into the ravine and the root affording cover and port-holes to fire through. This was about fifteen rods from the road on the right side and the river on the left, and commanded a good view of the road in the direction the enemy would come. The ground to the river was covered with a thick growth of small trees, briars and alders in the ravine.

About two o'clock p. m. the British column came in sight and slowly passed. Several were mounted officers, but none whose grade seemed high enough. Soon came in sight an officer mounted upon a splendid white steed, richly dressed, with a broad red silk sash around his waist, and a long white plume in his hat, with several staff officers near by and Indian scouts in the road. Whitcomb thought he would do, and when he came within fifty rods, took deliberate aim and fired. He saw the officer throw up his hands and reel back. Then he quickly hid under the roots. The Indians near by in the road saw the smoke of his gun and dashed into the woods after him; supposing he would run back, they did not stop to look for him there, but hurried on and crossed the log within twenty feet of him.

As soon as they had passed, Whitcomb crawled rapidly alongside of the log into the ravine and down the ravine under the bridge into the river and up the river in the water under the thick alders, occasionally coming up onto the land for a rod or two, and crossing over and back. He had gone about a mile when he heard the bloodhounds "boo" on his track, but all his arrangements had been made to baffle and elude them, and he succeeded in delaying them so much that he gained upon them until dark, when he took a smaller stream, running out of his direct route, and waded in that for a mile, then left it and traveled all night and the next day without stopping, still keeping in the woods.

The officer shot was Gen. Gordon; he died in half an hour. At the time Whitcomb shot him his (Whitcomb's) provisions consisted of a half pint of parched corn which was all the food he had for four days. On the fifth day he crossed the line into Vermont, nearly starved, and his shoes entirely worn out. In all this time he had not kindled a fire or dared to shoot game lest the smoke and report of his gun should indicate his whereabouts to the pursuing Indians. But necessity, which knows no law, compelled him to act. He dared not venture to any house, fearing Tories; but finding a yoke of oxen feeding in a pasture, he shot one quickly through the head, cut out as much steak as he needed and skin enough for a pair of moccasins, ran into a deep swamp, kindled a fire, half roasted some steak and ate it upon the run, again fearing the smoke would betray him. The next morning he came upon an Indian camp where several had stopped over night, the fires not yet being out. He turned and traveled east half a day, then turned south and hurried on until he arrived at Royalton, Vt., where he went to a house and asked for food and rest.

The British had offered a thousand crowns for his head and two thousand crowns for him delivered at any British post alive. The

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

Indians pursued and hunted him along the lake to the very walls of Ticonderoga.

After some time Whitcomb joined a small frontier guard stationed at Lancaster, N. H., in a block house. Feeling secure, he often went out hunting. One day when out alone, he was suddenly seized from behind, disarmed and bound, by five Indians and hurried off into Canada and down the St. Francis river. Night came on dark when within twenty miles of a British post at the mouth of the river, where the Indians were to give him up and take the reward. They camped upon an island. Whitcomb's hands and feet were securely tied to a stake and otherwise bound, also bound to two Indians, one sleeping on each side of him. Escape seemed impossible. Whitcomb recognized in one of his captors the very Indian who years before he had found alone, nearly famished, and whom he fed and supplied with food, and had by look and gesture tried to make the Indian know him, but entirely failed to gain any sign of recognition. Death seemed inevitable and hope departed, yet he slept. About two o'clock a. m. he was awakened by gentle taps on the mouth to indicate silence, and then the fingers passed to his eyes and found them open. His bonds were carefully cut, he was directed, by motions of the hands, to rise and follow, which he cautiously did, to the river. The Indian whom he had formerly aided when starving turned to him and handed him his gun, powder horn, ball pouch, knife and a bag of parched corn: reminding Whitcomb of his former kindness to him, said "I now pay you, go, go." Whitcomb slipped into a canoe and cast it off and pushed into the river. The Indian gave him the farewell salute by motion and turned back to the camp. Whitcomb quickly pushed back to the shore, cut a hole in each of the remaining canoes, pushed them off into the stream, resumed his own canoe and crossed immediately to the other shore, then cut a hole in his canoe and pushed it off and ran for life.

About four o'clock he heard the Indian's distant whoop of alarm and soon after the whoop of disappointment and anger when they found all their canoes gone. Whitcomb pushed on with all his energy, day and night, until safe, not stopping until he reached Massachusetts, the home of his early childhood, where he remained during the war. In due time he received his major's commission and pay and in his old age received a major's pension. His good friend, the Indian, he never heard of after that night's parting on the island.—(From Hemanway's Vermont Gazetteer.)

A Famous Antiquarian and a Successful Collector.

WALDO HUNT WHITCOMB,<sup>8</sup> Robert Line, born in Northampton, Mass., was the second son of David Brainerd and Nancy Laveke Clapp Whitcomb, both of whom were descendants of early settlers of Hampshire county. His father was born in Williamsburg, Mass., January 1, 1800, and after living in West Brookfield, Westhampton and Goshen, settled, in 1822, in Northampton and lived there until his death on the famous "Yellow Day," September 6, 1881. He was a man of firm purpose and unflinching moral courage, an earnest Democrat, a staunch Episcopalian and one of the founders of St. John's parish. The mother, whom David Whitcomb married in 1828, was born October 10, 1800, and died March 10, 1866; she was a woman of great activity and usefulness.

Waldo Hunt Whitcomb will be remembered not only as a gentleman of charming individuality, and a man of integrity, but as one of the greatest collectors of objects of antiquarian value who have ever lived in this country. He was an assiduous, careful and intelligent collector of old furniture, books, prints, pictures, crockery, metal ware and everything else which has value because of its age and historical connection. For at least a quarter of a century Mr. Whitcomb had been a frequent visitor of old farmhouses in which there was an abundance of things rare and curious, and he had been a familiar figure at auctions both far and near where there was any probability that anything of value in the eyes of the antiquarian would be disposed of.

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

In these ways he expended thousands of dollars and acquired in course of time one of the finest of America's collections. He kept his collection entire until 1903 when part of it was placed in the Forbes Library and part was sold in Boston, but the greater part still remains in his home in Northampton.

His home, like himself, was unique; it had been a barn, but the family rooms were made comfortable with bathroom, electric bells, set basins, etc., but the part that appealed most strongly to Mr. Whitcomb was the easterly half of the upper story; this was a reproduction of a house built in 1714. Learning that the old homestead was to be demolished Mr. Whitcomb purchased the doors, window casings, mantels, cupboards and floors of three rooms; they were taken down carefully, the nails were drawn, the hard yellow pine was replaned and finished, and the three rooms were made into one, an exact reproduction of one of the old rooms of nearly 200 years ago; the old strap hinges were put on the doors, the old mantel and fire place, the old locks and latches were replaced, and in one corner was placed a closet taken from the house of Preserved Clapp (Northampton), and set up as it was made in 1719.

It was in this room, lighted by candles, that Waldo Whitcomb gave his delightful birthday parties and there entertained notabilities and appreciative friends. He was not only a connoisseur of art and antiquities, but of wine as well; the experts who attended his birthday parties say that a glass of his Madeira or sherry was a treat to be remembered.

Waldo Whitcomb was not only a born antiquarian, he was one of those men of exceptional and unique personality who appear in a community but seldom in its history; his contribution to the civic life it is not easy to estimate; he was a shrewd man of business, a good manager, an industrious artisan, and finally a New Englander of the best type, whose ways were the ways of his fathers for generations before him. He died October 10, 1904.—(Gleaned from Massachusetts daily papers.)

APPENDIX.

Extracts from a letter by an aged lady to Miss Charlotte Whitcomb mentioning, among other things, the origin of the name,—an interesting tradition.

Toronto, Ontario, Oct. 18, 1902.

My Dear Miss Whitcomb:—

I know now quite well who you are, since you mention the name of your father. Though I am seventy-seven, you and I are second cousins. I am descended from Joseph, the second son, and you from Robert, the youngest son, of the same father, Robert Whitcomb. Your father and mother visited at my father's house when they were first married and I was a young girl. They came with quite a party of Whitcombs from Vermont: your father's sister, Mrs. Kingsbury, and her husband, Uncle Samuel Whitcomb, and his wife, Uncle James Whitcomb (my father's uncle, you know), from Bolton, Vt., and his wife, and some of our neighboring kindred in Canada.

I remember Mrs. Kingsbury best of all because she was so beautiful. She wore a white lace veil in the evening when the other married ladies wore caps. It made her look very distinguished. She had other veils, too, which she had flowered herself.

My grandfather, Joseph Whitcomb (he was the second son of Robert,<sup>5</sup>), was married twice. His first wife was Miss Harrison of Quebec, and Huldah Bacon's first husband was a Harrison, too. When grandfather's first wife died she left a letter requesting her husband to marry the widow Harrison who had lost her husband some time before, which my grandfather subsequently did. They had three sons and one daughter. My father, Joseph Skinner Whitcomb, was named for a friend in York State who was childless and who wanted to educate him, but when grandfather moved to Montreal he was educated in the Montreal and Quebec Colleges. My uncle, Samuel Bacon, was named after a bachelor brother of my grandmother's, and there was a Noah who settled in Fredonia, N. Y.

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

My father was a very reticent man and seldom talked of his family or of any one else, but I recall two incidents which I have heard him relate: When he lived in Montreal his mother's brother, Samuel Bacon, came to make a visit and he came in such grand style that a crowd collected and escorted him to the door thinking he was the governor whom they were expecting. There were no railroads then and people traveled in their own conveyances.

The other incident concerns my uncle, Samuel Bacon Whitcomb, who lived as others did, when the country was new, in a log house. He had killed a pig and it was suspended in the shed connected to the house. He was aroused in the night and got up to find a huge bear trying to get into the shed. He fired at the bear, but as he was not where he could get a good aim he succeeded only in wounding him, and then found himself out of ammunition; he took the meat into the house and barricaded the doors, but the bear seemed determined to get in. He said the bear kept him and the family up all night, but "he saved his bacon."

I have heard my family say many times that the name Whitcomb was originally White Combe and that it was taken from the place in England from which they came. Now I think that is absurd. I do not see why the Whitcomb family should not have had a name of their own as well as others. I fancy the place was named for the family instead of the family for the place.

I remain with much love,

Your cousin,
POLLY WHITCOMB BROWNE.

Note: That David<sup>3</sup> (Josiah<sup>2</sup>-John<sup>1</sup>) was the father of Joseph<sup>4</sup> was asserted by Prof. Shepardson, but as his assertion was unsupported by proofs it has been the subject of much question and controversy. The writer of the following letters, the Hon. Chas. Zebina Lincoln, an attorney of Albany, N. Y., and a descendant of Joseph<sup>4</sup> by way of his mother, was one of the doubters and the following letters stating his doubts, his investigations, and his conclusions, will be found interesting both in subject and in style, and should settle the question of the paternity of Joseph<sup>4</sup>.
C. W.

Albany, N. Y., July 8, 1903.

To Mr. J. T. Whitcomb.
Batavia, N. Y.

My Dear Josiah:—I received both of your letters and hoped to give the matter attention before, but it has not been convenient to do so. Miss Whitcomb's statement has raised a question that will require considerable research in the State Library, and I fear I cannot settle the question. I had assumed, perhaps without sufficient evidence, that the line contained in the memorandum I sent to you some time ago was correct. This is the line given in Reed's History of Swazey, a recent and very carefully prepared book. I think the same statement appears in Marvin's History of Lancaster, Mass., but I have not looked at that lately. In 1900, when I was looking up this matter, I spent a good deal of time examining every available source of information that I could discover in the State Library, also in the Genealogical Society's rooms in Boston. I also wrote to town clerks and other custodians of public records at Lancaster, Leominster and Bolton, Mass., where some of our people used to live and where some of them still live.

I am bound to admit that there is some uncertainty about the line back of Joseph 4th gen. I do not think there is any doubt about it back to him, that seems perfectly clear. You will notice by the memorandum that there were four Josephs in regular succession, the fourth being our grandfather, who died at Argyle. The first Joseph is said to have been born at Leominster in 1700, but I have not been able to satisfy myself beyond any doubt whose son he was. In setting him down as a son of Josiah, Jr., I have followed Mr. Reed and other historians. I cannot find that Josiah, Jr., had a son Joseph, but the records are not complete and it seems clear that he was married twice. While I was making my investigations I inquired also as to David, and cannot find that he had any son Joseph. I do not know the source of Mr. Reed's information on which he bases the statement that the first Joseph was the son of Josiah, Jr.; but the Swanzey book shows that numerous Whitcombs are now living there, some of them prominent persons, and Mr. Reed had abundant opportunity to learn all that the family knew. The first Joseph went to Swanzey about 1760; the public records are quite complete there, and these, combined with family tradition would be a sufficient source of information in most cases. I have no reason to doubt the accuracy of Mr. Reed's statement, but I cannot verify it absolutely. I tried to find a Joseph in other male lines coming from Josiah, Jr., but also failed in that, so I have fallen back on the statement of Mr. Reed. I intend to look up the matter a little further as soon as I can get an opportunity, probably early next week and will write to you again. According to the Lancaster records Josiah, Jr., the supposed source of our line, was born in 1666. David was born in 1668, but little seems to be known of David, especially so far as the records are concerned.

I hope you will ask Miss Charlotte to stop the press until we can straighten out our line, though I am not quite sure that we can get the kink out. If you have occasion to write to her again before the matter is closed up I wish you would see if she can tell you where Prof. Shepardson got his evidence as to David.

I am sorry to have somebody come along now and disturb my ancestors. It is no easy task to select and arrange a line of agreeable ancestors. It has cost me a good deal of trouble and some money to fix up mine, and now comes this western iconoclast and rudely upsets my family tree. I have become quite attached to Josiah. He seems a very agreeable character, and he was a very satisfactory occupant of my ancestral hall. It is unkind now to be told that I must give him up and take a total stranger. I fear I never shall feel at home in David's family, especially after having set him aside and preferred another. However, as you suggest, it probably will make little difference with my eternal happiness.

The blank that Miss Whitcomb sent me asks for the date of the marriage of my grandfather and grandmother Whitcomb. Can you or May furnish this? If you can, please do so soon, and I will send on my report. I think I will also send Miss Whitcomb a copy of the memorandum I have made unless you have already sent yours to her. This shows the supposed line from John, the first comer, down to and including the children of our grandfather, Joseph.<sup>4</sup>

I hope to write to you again early next week, but I hardly expect to add anything to the information I have already given.

Very sincerely yours,

C. Z. LINCOLN.

Albany, July 13, 1903.

My Dear Josiah:—L. and I spent some time in the State Library today trying to find something new on the Whitcomb ancestry question, but I cannot add anything to the statements in the letter I wrote you last week.

“Reed’s History of Swanzey” makes Captain Joseph Whitcomb (first of the four Josephs) the son of Josiah, Jr., grandson of the first John. I can find nothing which indicates that our line runs through David.

According to the Lancaster records of births and marriages, David was born February 20th, 1668, and was married to Mary Fairbank, May 31st, 1700; those records do not show any children born to David. Mr. Reed says that David (apparently meaning the same David) was married to Betty White, January 13th, 1730. If this is the same David, he was then sixty-two years old, but Mr. Reed gives him a large family of children after that. There is no Joseph in this family. There was another David of a later generation and I think this was the one meant by Mr. Read, and not the David born in 1668.

THE WHITCOMB FAMILY.

Again it will be observed that the first David was married May 31st, 1700, being then thirty-two years of age. The first Joseph is said to have been born in 1700, which would hardly be probable, as a son of David.

Miss Whitcomb speaks of the "Bolton" records. I have written to you before that I do not know what she means. Lancaster was the original town and the early records are there. Bolton was erected in 1738, and Leominster, where the first Joseph is said to have been born, in 1740; but the original records remain in the original town of Lancaster and have to be consulted in looking up early history in what is now Bolton or Leominster.

Unless I can get more evidence I think I must stick to Josiah, Jr., as our ancestor. I am not yet willing to transfer the line to his brother David.

Very sincerely yours,

C. Z. LINCOLN.

---

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 31, 1903.

Miss Charlotte Whitcomb,
Minneapolis, Minn.

My Dear Miss Whitcomb:—I received your letter of the 13th in which you suggest using in your book, some part of my letter of July 8th, to Mr. J. T. Whitcomb in relation to the first Joseph, supposed to be a son of Josiah, Jr. Thinking the matter over it occurred to me that I might possibly get further information, although when I was examining the subject three years ago I thought I had exhausted all available sources. I think I ought to say that I then had doubt whether the first Joseph, so-called, was a son of Josiah, Jr. I could not find that Josiah, Jr., had a son Joseph, but I learned from the town officers in Lancaster and vicinity that some of the records of that period had been lost, from which I concluded that it was not impossible that Josiah might have had a Joseph. Besides, I learned that

APPENDIX.

Josiah, Jr., was married twice, and from available records there was a lapse of at least six years between his first child and the second, so far as the record disclosed, and sometime in that period his first wife died and he married again, but I have not been able to ascertain the date of the second marriage. I did learn the date of his death and the fact that when he died in 1718 he left three minor children, for whom a guardian was appointed in due course. One of these, the eldest, was a third Josiah. This evidence convinced me that the first Joseph in our line, said to have been born in 1700, could scarcely have been born that year if he was the son of Josiah, Jr., because Josiah 3d occupied substantially that birth date. This situation led me at that time (1900) to try to find a Joseph in David's family, but I failed. The town clerks and others persons with whom I communicated said there was no record of any Joseph in David's family, and in fact there seems to have been no town record of David's children. This led me to the conclusion that there must be some other evidence in relation to the children of Josiah, Jr., that I had not been able to discover, and I felt justified in falling back upon Reed's "History of Swanzey," largely for the reason that descendants of the 1st Joseph had lived in that town and vicinity for at least a century. Several of them are prominent people there and might reasonably be presumed to know the main facts concerning their ancestry, at least so near as the 1st Joseph. I therefore accepted the statement in Reed's history as probably accurate, but did not accept it until I had made an independent investigation leading to the result already stated, and which result I then felt was not satisfactory.

After receiving your letter of the 13th I began another inquiry to see if I could find any record of David's children. I found that David died April 11, 1730, and his wife, Mary, January 5th, 1734. These are the dates on their tombstones in the old cemetery in Lancaster, Mass. David died intestate leaving six children: 1 Rebeckah, 2 David, 3 Jonathan, 4 Joseph, 5 Benjamin, and 6 Simon. Real estate owned by David was divided among the members of his family in partition proceedings and Joseph received a share of land in Lancaster. In 1900, when I was studying this subject, I wrote to Mr. J. C. L. Clark, town clerk of Lancaster. He then seemed unable to obtain any information relating to David, probably because he did not go beyond his own office records. After receiving your letter of the 13th I wrote to him again suggesting that there might be other sources of information, calling his attention to other possible records and also to tombstones. I did not suppose the tombstone record would be of any avail beyond David, because I understood that the first Joseph went to Swanzev and lived there until his death. Mr. Clark resumed the investigation and under date of the 21st inst. wrote me that he had consulted the tombstones of David and Mary, furnishing the dates above stated, and that from various records he obtained the following facts (I quote from his letter) :

Rebeckah, baptized at Lancaster in 1708, married Ezra Sawyer of Lancaster, January 16, 1726. The latter information from the Middlesex Registry.

David married Betty White of Lancaster, January 13, 1731.

Jonathan married Rachel Woods. December 12, 1722.

Joseph, "Joseph Whitcomb and Damaris Priest, both of Lancaster, were married January 20, 1725." (by John Houghton, Esq.)

Benjamin, baptized November 26, 1710. Had wife, Dorothy, in 1735.

Simon, baptized March 7, 1714, married July 12, 1733, Thankful Houghton.

From other records I had already learned that David was married to Mary Fairbank, May 31, 1700. In view of this fact the statement in Read's history that Joseph 1st was born in 1700 can scarcely be accurate. According to the records in the partition proceedings Joseph seems to have been the fourth child, but this is only an inference from the statement to me by the register and may not be accurate. Children were usually baptized within a year or two after their birth and if Rebeckah, as stated, was not baptized until 1708 there is room for the supposition that Joseph and some of the other children were born before Rebeckah. It will be observed that these records do not show the baptisms of David, Jonathan and Joseph. Thus if Rebeckah was baptized in 1708 her birth probably was not later than 1706, which would, in the order usually discovered in those ancient records, carry Joseph's birth to 1712. This will hardly do in view of the fact that he was married in 1725. Read's history does not give any month or day for the birth of Joseph, but simply the year, 1700. It seems as if the Swanzey Whitcombs ought to be able to settle this question so that there would be no doubt about it. I find frequent mistakes in dates growing out of the old practice of tying two years together, resulting from the custom of ending the year with the month of March. Thus January 15, 1700-1 is often given as January 15, 1700, when it should be 1701. This may be the reason for the mistake in Read's history of the date of the birth of Joseph 5th, which is given as 1731, whereas the records give it as March 15, 1732.

APPENDIX.

In Read's history David, who is stated as third in line from the original John (Josiah, Sr., being second) is said to have married Betty White, and the book gives the names and dates of births of several children of this marriage. I call attention to this, thinking you may have occasion to consult Read's history and to show that he has here the wrong David, namely, the second David, fourth in line from John, instead of the first David, third in line. It was clear to me before that Mr. Read was wrong in regard to the David named by him and this question seems now definitely settled by the official record furnished by Mr. Clark.

I received your letter of the 21st, enclosing a copy of the letter written by Prof. Shepardson in 1893, relating to this matter. I had already become convinced that the 1st Joseph belonged in David's line and am glad now for my own satisfaction that I pursued an independent investigation before reading Prof. Shepardson's letter. Prof. Shepardson is, I think, clearly in error in supposing that David left a will, but this is a mere incident and not important. I had already written to the probate office and found that David died intestate. After reading Prof. Shepardson's letter I wrote again and received this morning another letter from the register in which he says there was no will. Incidentally it may be noted that in Mr. Read's history Joseph (4) is said to have come from Lancaster, Mass., to Swanzey or vicinity between 1755 and 1760. This suggestion is verified, at least in part, by the official record which shows a baptism of one of Joseph's children in Lancaster, April 21, 1754.

My recent investigations lead me to the conclusion that Joseph Whitcomb, who married Damaris Priest, was the son of David Whitcomb (3), who was a son of Josiah (2). I do not now think there is any doubt about this conclusion. This record is official: first from the judicial proceedings taken in Middlesex County for the partition of David Whitcomb's land in which the name of Joseph appears as one of the children receiving a portion of the property by partition; and second, from public records of births, baptisms, marriages and deaths. I suppose you already have the date of David's birth. According to the record he was born February 20, 1668. As already stated he died April 11, 1730. His mother's name was Rebeckah Waters and it will be noted that he named his first daughter Rebeckah.

Very sincerely yours,

CHARLES Z. LINCOLN.
